Bid to Europeans Follows Failure To Buy U.S. Jets

By Warren Getler nal Heroid Tribube HANNOVER, West Germany - Jordan has expressed serious interest in purchasing up to 40 ad-vanced European jet fighters, after the failure of its efforts to obtain similar aircraft from the United States, senior officials of a West European combat aircraft consoroum said Friday.

Negotiations over the Tornado air-to-air combat planes, valued at more than $1.5 billion, could be concluded within the year, a senior executive of the Munich-based Panavia Aircraft GmbH consortium said in an interview at the Hannover air show. The official declined to be identified.

The plane is jointly produced by a consortium of British, West German and Italian companies. British Aerospace and Messerschmitt-Bölkow-Blohm, a German concern, each hold 42.5 percent of the shares with Aeritalia holding the remaining 15 percent. In February, the British government concluded a $7-billion arms package with Saudi Arabia that included 72 Toroado combat aircraft.

The Saudi decisioo to purchase the Tornado --- Panavia's first ma-jor success with the plane outside the North Atlantic Treaty Organization --- was linked, according to Western diplomats, to Saudi Arabia's frustration over not getting a clear commitment from Washington on the sale of U.S. built F-15 fighters for its air force. Jordan has said it is interested in acquiring 25 to 40 of the Tornado's Air Defense Version, a medium- to long-range air-to-air interceptor equipped with British-made Sky Flash missiles, according to Pana-Via executiva

Reagan Rejects Criticism Of Shift in SALT Policy

United Press Interna WASHINGTON - The White House reaffirmed on Friday the decision by President Ronald Reagan not to be bound by the limits of the SALT-2 arms treaty and rejected congressional moves to chal-lenge his decision.

Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, responding to a quesdon about growing congressional opposition to Mr. Reagan's plans, said: "Our position hasn't changed on SALT-2. The president has made his decision on modernizaoon by the end of the year."

Asked what Mr. Reagan thought of the criticism, Mr. Speakes said: "We don't like it. The president will take the congressional views in consideration but his decision has been made."

WASHINGTON -- Aboot two weeks ago, as the Reagan administration considered whether to continue to comply with the SALT-2 arms agreement, the ranking Soviet diplomat here was invited to the State Department to discuss a variety of outstanding U.S.-Soviet issues, including Moscow's alleged stonewalling at the Geneva arms talks and its refusal to set a date for the next summit meeting.

"It was a very unsatisfactory, even acrimonious, meeting, with no give by the Soviets," a U.S. official said Wednesday. On May 27, President Ronald Reagan

Dozens of Exceptions

By Gary Klott New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The Senate Finance Committee's tax-revision bill, intended to create a more uniform tax system for husinesses and individuals, contains dozens of special exceptions granted to individuals and corporadons.

Embedded in the 1,489-page bill oow before the Senate are more than $5 billion in special favors that senators have inserted for their consotuents. Many would protect existing tax benefits for poblic or semipublic projects being planned or under construction.

But, as in past tax bills, private companies and individuals also will benefit from the special provisions. Among them are General Mills Inc., General Motors Corp., Pan Am Corp., Chrysler Corp., North-west Orient Airlines, Control Data Corp. and major steel companies. All 20 members of the Senate Finance Committee were able to obtain such favors. But about half of the exceptions were granted to senators outside the committee. A committee staff member said the requests of senators who strongly supported the bill were looked on more favorably than others. Senator Daniel Patrick Movnihan, a Democrat of New York, who was one of the leading supporters of the tax-revisioo effort in the committee, received more excep-oons than any other senator, according to one staff member. These special exceptions are hidden in legislaove language that masks the identity of the company or community involved. Even senators have been unable to learn all of the special provisions, although Senator Boh Packwood, the Oregon Republican who is chairman of the Finance Committee, said he would give them a full list soon.

Such special provisions, known as "transition rules," have traditionally been part of tax bills and bave been used by committee chairmen to help gain support fo the legislation.

The tax-revision bill passed by the House of Representatives in December contained even mor transioon rules, which would cos about $26 billion. These favors als were masked in statutory language Some senators are angry that s many special favors are bein granted. Others complain that the were not given the opportunity fo exceptions themselves. Senate Carl Levin, a Democrat of Mich gan, objected that the special provisions were not identified clearly.

Mr. Levin said: "We would lik a oumber of us, a list of the trantions so that we can see what a the standards which have be used, so that we can see what situ oons in our states might fit the standards."

MANILA - By boycotting the presidential election in February, the Communist Party of the Philippines deprived itself of a chance to lead the revolution that toppled Ferdinand E. Marcos, an official party publication has declared.

The Communists' official organ, Ang Bayan, called the boycott a "major political blunder," saying the decision was based on "an incorrect reading of the political situation.

The mimeographed pamphlet was received Friday in Manila. By saying that the boycott was ill-advised, the party gave credence to reports of a split within its ranks.

"The boycott policy showed an insufficient understanding of the tasks of political leadership during such a time," the publication said, "as well as a lack of appreciation of the current level of mass participation in revolutionary struggles."

factions of the ruling classes. "And when the aroused and militant moved spontaneously but res-

In Detroit, Students Say Guns Are Prevalent in School

By James Risen Les Angeles Times Service DETROIT — On and off school grounds, shootings among inner-city teen-agers here have produced a sense of crisis. Although Detroit and other major cities have taken steps to control guns, students say they have become a part of everyday life in high-school hallways. The first two Fridays in Detroit's school year produced two of its worst incidents of violance On Oct. 11, Gregory Allen, a 17-year-old from Detroit's Cody High School, walked into a McDonald's restaurant near the school and fired a shotgun twice into a group of youths who were fighting in the midst of a lunch time crowd of more than 100 Cody students. Eleven students were wounded.

Prosecutors said Mr. Allen, who was sentenced to 30-to-50 years in prison, started shooting because he was angry that a close friend was being beaten in the melee.

A week later, during Murray-Wright High School's homecoming football game on Oct. 18, four teen-agers in a car pulled up behind the grandstand at the inner-city school. One pulled out a shotgun and fired on the crowd. Seven persons, aged 13 to 20, were wounded. Three youths, including one aged 14, have pleaded guilty in the case, while 17-year-old Damon Gamble, charged with the actual shootings, will go on trial as an adult on June

Often during this school year, the names of students from the Detroit public schools have been showing up on the Detroit Police Department's blotter, both as victims and alleged felons. "A monumental problem exists — gms are really widespread in the schools," said Krystal Miller, 18, a senior and editor of the school newspaper at Mumford High School. "It's almost become a blase thing. The shock of kids carrying guns has really worn off. Kids you never thought would carry them are carrying guns."

"I know three or four kids who bring guns to school every day," said Jay Norman, 16, a junior at Mumford. "They carry them for protection, or to avenge a fight, and it's a power thing. They think it gives them sta-

According to statistics compiled by the Detroit Free Press newspaper from police reports, at least 88 youths aged 16 and under have been shot in Detroit so far in 1986, including 12 who have been killed. In 1985, 236 were shot and 28 were murdered.

To meet the growing threat, Detroit for several years has required all students to pass through metal detectors as they enter school buildings in the morning. It has also conducted random weapons sweeps at its high schools. Experts say that while a number of hig-city school systems have experimented

The searches in Detroit, which began in January 1984, had been halted in recent months while the school system defended their legality in a court battle with the American Civil Liberties Union. But a federal court dismissed the ACLU's case and approved the city's use of metal detectors under new guidelines designed to protect the constitutional rights of students. Often, the shootings in Detroit seem senseless. In fact, Detroit police say the shootings are not the result of rival gangs fighting for turf. Police experts on youth crime here say youths are shooting each other simply for their expensive gym shoes or to settle minor arguments. "We don't really bave a problem with organized gangs like Los Angeles or Chicago or New York," says Inspector Julius Higdon, chief of Detroit's special crime section, which handles juvenile crime in the inner city. "But we have some loose-knit groups of kids who name their groups-after the brand names of shoes, like Adidas or Fila, and they shoot kids at bus stops for their shoes" if they are wearing the brand adopted by the group. School officials point out that Detroit is only one of many cities wrestling with the legal and logistical problems caused hy weapons in the classroom.

In fact, big cities across the United States are starting to take stronger steps to deal with guns. Houston, which has had several school shootings this year, established a new center in May where disruptive students found with weapons will be reassigned and kept out of the mainstream schools.

Baltimore, where two students have been shot to death on school grounds this year, set new guidelines in April prohibiting students from bringing knapsacks or outer coats, which might conceal weapons, into class-rooms. While it rejected surveillance cameras and metal detectors, the school board has started a weapons hot line so students can anonymously warn school security personnel about those carrying guns.

In Los Angeles, some secondary schools now have "closed campuses," with only one entrance and exit during the day. Marty Estrin, a school spokesman, said that school police officers are also stationed full time in high schools and in patrol cars around campuses. While Los Ángeles expels students found with guns, "we haven't gotten to the point where we use metal detectors," he said.

There is still little agreement among experts nationwide over whether school violence is worsening in America; reliable nationwide statistics are not available. Still, it seems clear that the increased case with which guns are becoming available to teenagers has worsened the climate of fear in many inner city schools.

Go Slow on Poland

On May 29, Poland was accepted into the International Monetary Fund. The Jaruzelski regime hopes thus to regain some of the respectability lost in the years of martial law and to qualify for badly oceded Western credits and loans.

Just a few days later, the claim of recovery was jolted as Warsaw announced the capture of Zbigniew Bujak, the leader of a clandestine committee that has tried to keep alive the spirit of the Solidarity movement. He had managed to elude the secret and oot-so-secret police for four and a half years, repeatedly embarrassing the dictator-ship with declarations of defiance.

The official explanations of Mr. Bujak's feat trip over each other nonsensically: His activities were so inconsequential the authorities did oot search for him very hard.

.. His whereabouts was discovered only through the "civic atotude of society." His defiance was inspired not by Polish aspirations but by "Western centers of subversion." So be is being charged with conspiracy to overthrow the state, and faces a possible sentence of 10 years in prison.

Poles are asked to conclude that all dissenters are eventually caught and severely punished. Westerners are asked to believe that Mr. Bujak is a now irrelevant survivor of a distant past. For good measure, Poland leaks word that American intelligence knew of Warsaw's martial law plans in advance, and failed to alert Solidarity. No one should be deceived. Poles' true civic attitude is expressed in the shelter they gave Mr. Bujak and give other dissenters. Poles understand that he is threatened with a harsh sentence because the resistance continues to undermine Warsaw's "oormalization." And Westerners should note that many political prisoners again fill Poland's jails after they had been emptied by annes-ties conceived to impress Western opinion. Communist leaders in Warsaw and Moscow, not Americans, are responsible for the revolt and the martial law used to suppress it in 1981. The broad boycotts and political sanctions applied then bought some relief but are not the way to protest the piecemeal repressions of 1986. The West's re-engagement should be slowed. The Polish people who sustained Mr. Bujak and the other prisoners of conscience deserve better from the West than business as usual. A "normalization" built on show trials and repression is oot a qualification for new loans.

100 Centuries Later ...

What is society to do with radioactive wastes that will remain dangerous for 10,000 years? Nuclear power plants were built on the premise that safe storage of their waste would be no problem. Thirty years later the government is still groping for an acceptable site. Beating yet another retreat, the Department of Energy has now postponed its search for a permanent storage site in the eastern United States.

Ten thousand years is longer than any civilization has lasted. But two years, oot 10.000, is the borizon that daunts Washington. Local protests, combined with technical misjudgments, have sunk the chances of one favored disposal site after another. Hoping to end this string of reverses, Congress in 1982 devised an elaborate process designed to win states' confidence by selecting one site in the East and one in the West.

The Department of Energy has selected candidate sites for a Western depository but was surprised by the intense opposition stirred by its search for sites in the East. It oow says a single site, in the West, will suffice because spent nuclear fuel is piling up more slowly than expected.

Bnt Congress decreed two sites, intending the burden to be spread. One favored Western site - Hanford, Washington - is near the Columbia River and may be perturbed by earthquakes. A continued search for a site in the East would be prudent lest all Western sites prove flawed. Nn wonder the department's decision looks like yet another triumpb of politics over geology. There seems an obvious advantage in postponing the search for a site in New Hampshire's granite until after the 1988 primaries. But postponement risks undermining public faith in a fair selection procedure. Are there on other places to dispose of highly radioactive wastes? They could be rocketed into the sun - but all NASA's rockets have failed. They could be left to melt through the Antarctic ice caps by their own heat - but their capsules might disintegrate upon hitting bedrock. They could be buried undersea in the plains of sediment that cover the oceanic plates - but there might be accidents in transit.

That leaves disposal on land, Either the wastes will have to be buried deep in rocks free of underground water, fissures, earthquakes and minerals coveted by future gencrations, or they could be moved to a single temporary storage site above ground until a permanent repository can be found. Fearing that any temporary site would become permanent, however, Congress insisted that permanent disposal site be found first.

The Department of Energy, daunted by the pobics of the East and the geology of the West, seems too ready to abandon the careful plan of the 1982 law. The message from Congress now must be We meant what we said.

Lessons of a War Game: It Matters Which Gun Is Smoking

WASHINGTON -A few days ago, behind closed doors in a "situation room" at the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies, an expert group of former na-donal security officials with bipartisan back grounds played out a hair-raising "war game" about a hijacking, with a nuclear twist. As president of the United States, there was James Woolsey, former undersecretary of the navy in the Carter administration. The Democraoc chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Les Aspin, played White House chief of staff. Eugene Rostow, once underscen-tary of state for political affairs in the Johnson ministratioo and later head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency for Ronald Reagan, was secretary of state. Mr. Reagan's former oatiooal security adviser, Robert McFarlane, was secretary of defense. Brent Scowcroft played the role he played in the Ford administration, national security adviser. (Dan-iel Schorr, the veteran television newscaster, was White House press secretary.) The crisis they controated was the hijacking by four terrorists (two West Germans and two Arabs) of an American-owned airliner en route from Munich to Rome. With a sense of recent

America's Dark New Identity

By Tom Wicker

EW YORK - President Rea-N gan apparently does not care -but other Americans should - that his policies are causing much of the world to identify the United States, oot the Soviet Union, as the primary nhstacle to ouclear disarmament.

Reports from the recent meeting of NATO foreign ministers at Halifax and from European capitals confirm that allied governments, even Britain and West Germany, are disappointed and angered by Mr. Reagan's deci-sion to abandon the unratified limits of the SALT-2 treaty.

Unnamed spokesmen indicate that the president also is pondering when, more than whether, to abandon the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty - the most important arms control agreement yet reached --which his admin-istration already has undermined by its willingness to "reinterpret" it.

Another cause of the dark new identity Mr. Reagan is giving the nation is his refusal to enter orgotiations for a comprehensive test ban treaty. At the annual congress of International Physicians for Prevention of Nuclear, War, just concluded at Cologne, delegates of all oatinns condemned this adamant stance.

The physicians' group has long opposed ouclear testing. But Mr. Reagan might have been surprised at the vigor with which twn of the political leaders on the program joined in attacking his arms control policies.

history, the game's designers fetch the plane up at the same North Atlantic Treaty Organization air base at Sigonella in Sicily, where U.S. Navy F-14s forced down the Egyptian 737 carrying the hijackers of the Achille Lauro.

There is a bomb on board and, unbeknownst to the terrorists, it is radioactive, leaking cobalt 60, slowly poisoning the passengers. The "crisis managers" are at a loss as to how to storm the plane without having the bomh blow up. Before they can act, it does -- destroying the air base. Enraged and vengeful, the decision-makers are unanimously in favor of retalizoon. Libyan harbors are mined and port facilities bombed. Then, suddenly, the investigation mms up evidence. The finger of guilt swings to Syria. The case is "irrefutable," as the Reagan administra-tion is given to putting it, and enough of it becomes public knowledge so that it is impossible to ignore.

But the Russians, seeing the punishment that has been administered to Libya and assuming that something similar threatens Syria, become "very aggressive" about what they will do if Syria comes under attack. One participant said the script the war-gamers had to work with convincingly conveyed a real threat of a U.S.-Soviet confrootation of unpredictable scope. "All of the participants were forced into the same trap." said Robert Kupperman, an expert at the Georgetown center, which stage-man-and the are come. "There not a bar of torach at the Georgetown center, which stage that aged the war game. "There was a lot of tongh rhetoric when it was just Libya." he reported. But when it became Syria and the Soviet Union. "they began to see the limits on action." And so, after due deliberation, the war-gamers decided to break diplomatic relations with Syria and apply stiff economic sanctions.

Now you can argue how well or badly the game was played. Besides, it was only a game. There is a lesson in it, nonetheless: Insofar as retaliation is one of the weapons in countering or deterring terrorism, circumstances alter cases. It is oot always a matter of simply finding a "smoking gun" and then. Pow! So, to its credit, the administration is learning following the April bombing attack on Libya. Shortly thereafter, Mr. Reagan said that he would use force against state-sponsored ter-rorism in Syria or Iran if he had the kind of evidence he had of Libya's complicity in the bombing of the West Berlin discotheque. But Secretary of State George Shaltz later coast. They had often assured the Gulf states that Iran would not occapy Arab territory; what happened at Faw damaged their credibility.

Most important have been Syria's economic problems, which resulted from falling oil prices and a conse-guent cutback of Arab aid. Because Iran also has been badly hit by falling oil prices, it cannot make up for the drop in Arab aid to Syria. Indeed, Iran not only has stopped delivering cheap oil to Syris but has been pressuring it to repay S2 billion in debts.

Meanwhile, the moderate Gulf Arabs have made it clear that, despite their own economic difficulties, they will still be prepared to reward Syrian good behavior. And reopening the Iraqi pipeline would provide Syria with extra income from transit fees.

The U.S. air raid on Libya and the ensuing allegations in Washington and Western Europe about Syria's role in terrorism have had a sobering effect, as indicated by Syria's promi to help arrange the release of French hostages held in Lebanon. And Presi-dent Hafez al-Assad has denied any involvement in terrorism. Yet what would be the effect, both on the Iran-Iraq war and on broader Middle East poblics, if there were a Syrian-Iranian-Iraqi realignment?

It is unlikely that Syria would support Iraq militarily, if only because of the animosity between Mr. Assad and Saddam Hussein. For Syna to move away from Iran would be one thing; to antagonize it deliberately but then the Gulf Arabs might reduce their subsidies to Iraq. An abrogation of the Syrian-Iranian alliance would cost Iran militarily by restricting its ability to obtain supplies. Yet the effect would be marginal, because Iran has never received sophisticated military hardware from Syria. A Syrian change of heart would be a psychological and moral boost for Iraq and a blow to Iran. It would help Iraq to withstand Iranian pressures and reduce any chance for an Iranian victory. Still, whether Iran would be forced to accept an unfavorable peace would be determined only by its ability to cope with economie pressures tied to oil revenues. The principal beneficiaries of a diplomatic shift would be the Gulf Arabs. Their political burdens would be reduced because the loss of Syrian support would make an Iranian victory less likely. It would also deprive Iran of an ally in its subversive activitics in the Gulf. A change in Syrian allegiances would have even less effect m broader Middle East pobtics, especially the Arab-Israeli conflict. Syria's approach to Arab-Israeli peace-making is determined by its desire both to regain the Golan Heights and to be the leader of the Arab world. On its own, a Syrian breach with Iran, and fence-mending with Iraq, would be unlikely to help Mr. Assad.

ing the spread of nuclear weapons. Support for or opposition to a comprehensive test han treaty, he argued, was "the litmus test of the seriousness of the will" to end the ouclear arms race. The international audience in Cologne, well aware that Mr. Reagan could oot pass that test, thundered its applause. On two other points, Mr. Rau's words might well be pondered in Washington, since he is given a good chance to defeat Chancellor Helmut Kohl next year:

Germans must see to it, Mr. Rau said, that "nuclear weapons should disappear once again from both German states"; and he welcomed the prospect of "a nuclear-free zone in Europe." As for President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, though Mr. Rau did oot name it. "what we need is food for people and not weapons for outer space." Mr. Ran spoke before Mr. Rea-gan's renunciation of SALT-2 was fully understood in Europe. But that will be a windfall for the Social Democratic candidate in January, owingto the close association with Mr. Reagan that Mr. Kohl has claimed.

WASHINGTON - There have gic Faw peninsula on Iraq's Gulf been growing indications of an impending Syrian-Iraqi reconcilia-tion. A oumber of moderate Arab states, especially Saudi Arabia and lordan, have been trying to persuade Syria to reassess its relations with Iraq for some time. Even the Soviet Union, which is deeply concerned about the rise of Islamic fundamentalism, has been urging Syria to re-solve its differences with Iraq.

The Syria-Iranian alliance has always been an odd sort of coupling; there are deep ideological differences between revolutionary-Islamic Iran and secular-socialist Syria. What really brought the two countries together was their mutual animosity toward Iraq and its president, Sad-dam Hussein. From 1982 to 1985, Syria also used Iran and its influence within the Lebanese Shiite community to foil U.S.-Israeli plans for restructuring Lebanese political life and to salvage Syria's predominant position in Lebanon. Syria paid a price for its alliance with Iran: It lost considerable income by closing the pipeline carrying Iraqi oil to the Mediterranean. But Iran made up for part of Syria's loss of income by providing it with cheap oil and economic assistance. And even though moderate Arab states in the Gulf were unhappy about Syria's alliance with Iran, they continued to provide substantial aid ont of fear. Things began to change in the last few months. Syria became increasingly concerned about Iranian influ-that "the single most important step that can be taken in the immediate future to slow the ouclear arms race." Meanwhile, as Mr. Reagan refuses much of the progressivity of the income tax. The right response is that much of that vaunted progressivity exists only oo paper. Over the years, Congress has voted, and rich people have resorted to, bundreds of pages of preferences to avoid the high nominal rates in the code. That is corrupting, intellectually dishonest and disruptive of the economy, in that it encourages investment purely for tax reasons, oot for productive purposes. Lower rates are the price of removing the preferences; they are worth it.

The best measure of the amount of income oow so intricately protected from tax lies here. The top tax rate, which was 70 percent when President Reagan took office and is 50 percent oow, would drop to 27 percent under the bill the Senate is cousidering. Yet there would be no appreciable shift in the share of the income tax burden borne by the richest taxpayers. This is mainly because the bill would ootlaw most of the phony losses by which subscribers to tax shelters now reduce their taxable income, and it would begin treating capital gains the same as ordinary income instead of exempting 60 percent of longer-term gains from tax as oow. The maximum capital gains tax is now only 20 percent and would go up under the Senate bill. But in general the much lower rates in that bill would apply to a much broader base.

a me s lower the rates, the less useful the deductions that preferences typically bring.

Those deploring the loss of progressivity will respond that the rate structure in the Senate bill is not just low but flat -15 percent for most people, 27 percent for those above, on third step even for multimillionaires. Our advice to them is to wait. The delicately balanced Senate bill already has several features the effect of which would be to impose a higher rate on some income of the rich; for example, as income reached a certain point, the personal deductino would be phased out. The House bill also cootains higher rates; a House-Senate conference is likely to produce a more progressive rate structure than exists in the Senate offering. But the likely side effect will be the reverse of reform as currently defined; the price will almost surely be preservation of some preferences.

The present rate structure is more symbol than true burden, a legislated sop to the national conscience. To apply genuinely progressive rates to a broadened base would be not the maintenance of the status quo, but a substantial increase in the tax burden of the rich. That may be a step the country wants to take eventually, but it is not what this good bill (which would reduce the tax burdens of the poor) has been about. That is next year's argument.

This is not just a political trade-off. There -THE WASHINGTON POST

Harsh Words on SALT

Violated all too often by the Russians. Never ratified by the Americans. Out of date. Inadequate. The second Strategic Arms Limitatioo Treaty is a poor wail of an greement. But it is all that an uncasy and divided world has. For hawks in the United States to take the initiative in serving notice that SALT-2, as far as they are concerned, is fit only for the trash can, would be provocative at the best of times. Now, as Mr. Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev blow hot and cold on the prospects for another summit later this year, it is tactically tough for America's allies to take. The harsh tone that the Reagan administration is adopting toward East-West relations and arms control

Justice for 'Atomic Veterans'

By law, there is no justice for "atomic veterans." Several thousand, who as soldiers were overexposed to radiation during U.S. bomh tests, have become ill or died. They and their families claim it was as a result of the exposure. But under current law, they will get no day in court to try to prove it. These soldiers deserve better than be trapped like laboratory mice, once in the atomic tests and now in a legal maze with no exit.

fond memories from my school years in America, there is an epitapb from Einstein that comes to mind when I grapple with the recent distortions regarding the record of my fa-ther, Kurt Waldheim: "The right to search for the truth also implies a duty. One must oot conceal any part of what one has found to be true That is a principle that Simon Wiesenthal, the famous Nazi-bunter, has lived up to by insisting on May 15, when referring to my father, that "there is absolutely no evidence the man was involved in war crimes." He went on to say that his purpose was oot to "defend Waldheim," but rath-er to "defend the truth." Unfortunately, few others have heeded Einstein's recommendation.

Since even my father's critics have had to admit that he was not involved personally in war crimes, two issues remain; that he was less than forthcoming about his wartime record, and the guilt-by-association charges. When he entered the Austrian Foreign Service in late 1945, Mr. Waldheim listed his military service in the Balkans both on the Austrian Civil Service questionnaire and in a broader curriculum vitae. Those files, which had been lost in the Foreign Ministry, have oow been found and prove that his service in the Balkans had always been acknowledged.

Some critics have made much of the fact that the English version of my father's book, "In the Eye of the Storm," made oo reference to his return to military service in 1942 after a leg injury had healed. But the German edidon, published at the same time, makes explicit reference to his return, mentioning also the south-eastern front (Trieste) as his last locadon at the end of the war. Reputable men have confirmed that they always knew of Mr. Waldheim's presence in the Balkans during the war. There was a definite reluctance on my father's part to talk about those dark years, a reluctance typical of all those who had to cope with a war whose cause they did not support. But there was no cover-up. It is a myth that he was a Nazi. My father demonstrated against the impending Anschluss, and subsequently my grandfather was deprived of his job and titles by the Nazis. My (ather and brother were beaten up by the Nazis for distributing anti-Nazi

VIENNA - Among the many tracts; my grandfather and uncle were subjected to police and Gestapo interrogations, and the family was pressured out of their hometown. All of this is well documented. Finally, my father's not having been a Nazi was confirmed in a report in 1979 by the U.S. mission in Berlin, and was reconfirmed in March and April by the president of Austria There is also the question of the nature of my father's service in the Balkans. During his seven years in. the Wehrmacht he was formally assigned to units in the Balkans for the last three years, and, of those, spent nine months in Vienna for studies and bome leave. In his assignments, he was an interpreter and was some-times used in a liaison function to the Italian Army. He had no powers of command, no combat role, nor was he present at or in any way involved in atrocities. And he was not involved in the deportation of Jews from Salonika, having been absent from Salonika when they took place. I am convinced that the record is clear. Not one charge against Mr. Waldheim has stuck for the simple reason that he was not a Nazi, was not a "senior in telligence officer," did very nose. And he stands accused by the United Nations War Crimes oot participate in the shameful slaughter of Jews or civilians or partisans or anything remotely connected to "war crimes." Finally, I would like to address the Jewish community by stating that I -and many young people in Austria are sad that had feelings have been aroused against a man who showed his active support for the Jewish people as foreign minister by having Austria act as a transit haven and first asylum for the emigration of Soviet Jews. To date, more than 260,000 Soviet Jews have passed through Austrian refugee facilities on their way to freedom in the West. I understand the anxiety of our Jewish compatriots in Austria and America that the Nazi Holocaust not be forgotten. I can assure those people that the vast majority of Austria's younger generation, two-thirds of the population, feel compassion for the suffering of the Hulocaust victims and support the Jews in wanting to keep alive this memory as a deterrent against its ever happening again. I know that the same holds true for most of the older generation, and definitely for my father.

One provincial Governor has already been shot for disloyalty to General Madero, and this example has not been lost upon some others who have little sympathy for the new regime. Officially, General Madero is a private citizen, but his entry into the capital will not lack the pomp of a military display. The city is adorned with flags and floral arch-fuels a real-estate boom to rival anything in New York or Boston. Estate sgents talk of family houses, nothing special, going for the pound equivalent of $1 million and up. The shops have · never seemed so full of huxaries.

But in the north of England, only 150 miles (240 kilometers) from London, the unemployed loiter in bleak streets. The European Community rates Merseyside, the area including Liverpool in the northwest, as one of the poorest parts of the community — rivaling Sicily, Sar-dinia and Calabria. 24

Unemployment used to be the abso-inte no of British politics. Twenty years -Strength ago the possible figure of one million unemployed was mentioned as a symbol of unacceptability. Today there are 3.4 ೆ. ಆತ್ಮ ~ million people out of work. Counting 1.77 500.000 more who are in official training programs for the unemployed, the figure approaches four million.

Moreover, much of the unemployment is long-term. Thousands of people in their 20s have not been able to find work since they left school at 16. Even large numbers of university graduates, the children of the middle class, have gone without real jobs for years.

Joblessness reflects the fact that Britain is in a process of deindustrialization. In the last 10 years manufacturing output dropped by 4.3 percent in this country. By comparison, it rose 61 percent in Japan, 42 percent in the United States and 22 percent in Italy.

Another phenomenon, just as signifi-cant in its way, is the decline in the quality of long-admired British public institutions. The National Health Service, universities and state schools are all hard pressed for funds. Britain is becoming an exemplar of what J.K. Galbraith called "private opulence and public squalor."

British universities are dependent on government funding. In the last five years, allowing for inflation, their moncy has been cut 20 percent. They have reduced the number of students by 20,000 and made academic salaries among the meanest in the land. Some universities may have to close.

Britain is on the way to becoming the worst-educated country in the First World, at a time when productive growth has come to depend more and more on education. The decline in public institutions has led middle-class people increasingly to seek private substitutes. Most belong to private health plans. Friends of mine who used to send their children to state schools no longer do. One of them remarked sadly on the shabbiness of the state school right next to his son's huxurious private school in south London.

Visitors to London are not likely to be aware of such changes. The city remains wonderfully attractive, the museums ex-Presidents and the Press citing, the parks sparkling. Even with the falloff in American trade, theaters offer a dazzling choice of plays: a superb Royal Shakespeare Company "Troitus and Cressida" set in the Boer War, experiments even in the commercial theater.

The changes, however, are beginning to tell on the character of the society. Neal Ascherson, a columnist of The Observer, wrote recently: "London is traveling backwards through time towards a relationship between wealth and labor that is almost precapitalist....

"What does this mean? Among other things, the return of servants. Not livin, like 'Upstairs, Downstairs': ing There isn't room for that, But commuter servants....

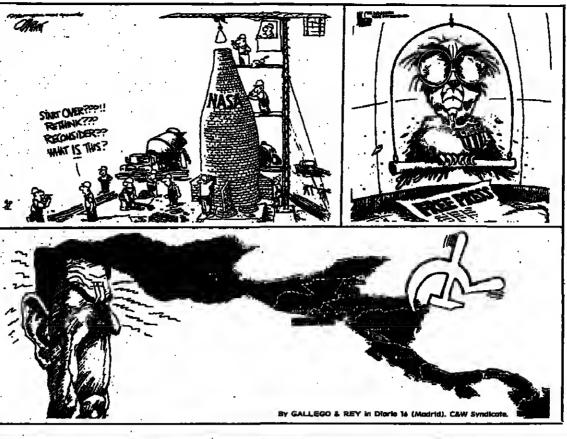

"It means a huge service and craft" population, making clothes and cullery, furniture and designer rugs for the rich, mending their electronics and guarding their homes. It means a capital city not unlike the pattern of 18th-century Paris, where almost all employment depend-ed on the needs of the Court and the thousands of privileged royal functionaries around it."

That may be too apocalyptic. But Britain is certainly becoming a more divided society.

People feel that, and they do not like it. Lord Young may tell them that they have never had things so good. But you will not find many Britons these day who are content about where their country is going.

Mr. Tenzing was a wonderful human being, although he could not read or write, except to sign his name. Incidentally, the year before the first successful ascent of Mount Everest, he led a Swiss expedition that had to give up the quest within some 300 meters (980 feet) from the top because of abommable weather conditions, Daniel's stages are proceeding apace. In the last week, two discoveries. First, the joy of throwing. I spent part of an afternoon watching him empty his play-pen. He had just figured out that if he releases an object as his arm goes through an arc, he can turn everything in reach into a projectile. The room came alive with the sound of plastic.

The discovery that be could give flight to objects - not just balls, but nuts and cups and cereal — has multiplied enor-mously Daniel's already considerable powers of destruction. These powers suggest that traditional ways of recording a child's progress are inadequate. True, height and weight are important.

But how much more so a concept the nuclear scientists have developed for the exquisite quantification of destructive capacity: throw-weight. Think how use-ful would be a medical chart that said "Daniel Krauthammer. Height: 28 inches (71.6 centimeters). Weight: 26 pounds (11.8 kilograms). Head circumference: 20 inches. Throw-weight: 2 megatons,

Lendl, Unseeded Pernfors Win To Gain Final of French Open

6-0, in a contest the beaten American called a "disaster."

Pernfors, a Swede who won the U.S. collegiate championship the last two years while attending the University of Georgia, beat eighthseeded Henri Leconte of France, 2-6, 7-5, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3.

Lendl, the French Open champion in 1984 and the U.S. Open titlist last year, will play Pernfors for the title Sunday. The women's champiouship was to be decided Saturday, with top-seeded Martina Navratilova playing defending champion and second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd.

Pernfors is the first unseeded player to reach the French Open men's final since Mats Wilander of Sweden in 1982, the year Wilander won the title for the first time. The last unseeded player in a men's Grand Slam final was Boris Becker of West Germany, who win at Wimbledon a year ago.

The Pernfors-Lecopte match started under cloudy skies, was interrupted twice by rain and ended in brilliant sunshine on center court, although it got colder. Players could see their breath, and spectators bundled in blankets and beavy coats.

Pernfors began his comeback after the first rain delay, which lasted about 214 hours. He trailed, 3-4, after breaking Leconte's service just before the rain began, held after the interruption and broke for a 6-5 lead, then beld for the set.

In the third-set tie breaker, Pernfors, having changed clothing during the second rain delay, trailed by 3-4 when he hit a forehand long. That was the last point he lost, as he finished out the set with a beautiful backhand shot down the line while Leconte was charging to the

U.S. Track Star Attempts Suicide

INDIANAPOLIS - Kathy Ormsby, the North Carolina State distance runner who set the U.S. collegiate record in the women's 10,000 meters this year, was in serious condition with a spinal injury Thursday after attempting a suicide jump off a 40-foot (12-meter) bridge. Ormsby, 21, a junior from Rockingham, North Carolina, leaped from the bridge Wednesday night after dropping out of the 10,000-meter final at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

She was being treated in the surgical intensive care unit at Wishard Memorial Hospital. A state-ment from her parents, Dale and Sallie Ornsby, issued through the hospital, said their daughter suffered "spinal cord damage and chest injuries." The statement added: "We are unsure at the present time if the damage is permanent."

According to Captain Larry D. Propst of the university police department, "A doctor who treat-ed her said she told him, 'I jumped."

Lieutenant Doug Cox of the university police said that "what we know is she dropped out of the race at the 6,500-meter point.

She was discovered by her coach, Rollie Geiger, and she did say to him at that time that she did jump off the bridge," Cox said. "I don't know how anybody could have fallen off without climbing up on the top, which is about 3½ feet to 4 feet high. There is no physical evidence to indicate that anything else happened," be said.

According to a statement by meet officials, Ormsby ran off the track, climbed a low fence and ran across a softball field. The bridge, over the White River, is about two blocks from Indiana University Track Stadium, According to a police report, she landed in weeds 20 feet from the water.

A source close to the team said that Ormsby "is a shy girl, an introvert. She seemed to put pressure on herself that she had to run fast every race. She apparently felt she had to win the NCAA race. She was hanging in with the leaders, but I guess she fell she couldn't win, and she couldn't handle it." A stadium official, who asked not to be identi-fied, said that Geiger "went looking for Ormsby after approximately 10 minutes. He thought she was crying. He was worried.

"He then decided to go by the river. And there she was. She had jumped on to a floodplain." Ormsby, a premed major on the academic dean's list at North Carolina State, had said she wanted to become a medical missionary. (AP. NYT)

Liverpool Will Sell Rush to Juventus

LIVERPOOL (AFP) - The Liverpool soccer club has agreed to sell Ian Rosh, the Welsh international, to the Italian club Juventus for a British record fee of £3.2 million ($2.1 million). But Rush, 24, still had to approve the deal.

He said Friday that "I have got to tell Juventus by Monday. If I don't fly out to Turin on Monday, it means I won't be signing."

Even if he does he still may play on loan with Liverpool oext season because of a Italian quota imposed on foreign players. Juventus already has two foreigners — Michel Platini of France and Michael Laudrup of Denmark - but might want Rusb to sign an option to join the team in 1987, when Platini's contract expires.

In West, Rising Concern Over Berlin Travel Curb East German Passport Controls Seen As Attack on Allies' Rights in City the bombing on April 5 of a nightclub patronized by U.S. soldiers.

By John M. Goshko Washington Past Service WASHINGTON — Western diplomats are increasingly concerned that after a decade of tranquillity East Germany and its pa-tron, the Soviet Union, once again are trying to expand Communist control over Berlin. Widespread compliance with this demand would enable East Germany to argue that Western countries recognize the crossing points as an international border. This recognition would strengthen the Communist bloc's contentioo that East Berlin is the capital of East Germany. The allied position is that Berlin is under the control of the four 4. principal World War II victors and that East Germany has oo authority there. "The East Germans," one U.S.

At issue is the drive started by official said, "clearly are hoping East Germany on May 26 to force that the resulting hardships will diplomats, military personnel and dependents from NATO countries cause attrition in the West's solidarity." "They think, the official said, other than the United States, Brit-

"that if they continue to stonewall, they can make the allies blink first

The official said the Western allies were determined to maintain opposition to the demand to demonstrate that "the old 'salami tactics' of cutting into allied rights a slice at a time won't succeed. U.S. officials said Thursday that despite some scattered instances of compliance the governments of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization so far have tried to rebuff the mancuver by taking a circuitous route out of the city limits into East Germany and then re-entering Ber-lin through other East German border points. But the officials acknowledged that East Germany's refusal to back down is making it difficult for the NATO countries to conduct their business in Berlin. Some Western diplomats warned that a continued impasse could crode NATO unity and cause some governments to seek a compromise.

These sources said that the situation is especially awkward for the government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany.

There are fears in Bonn that renewed East-West confrontation over Berlin could damage West . Germany's policy of broadening ties with East Germany, Signs already have emerged that elements . in the Bonn government are press-ing Mr. Kohl to urge the allies toward flexibility.

The history of the dispute goes back to 1945, when the four war-time Allies divided Germany into four zones of occupation. Berlin, located inside the former Soviet zone, was given special status as being under four-power control and was similarly divided into four -70065

There was every reason to suppose that Treasures of the Jewish Museum" at the Jewish Museum in New York would be exactly what it is — as varied, and as touching, an anthology as we could hope to see. The objects are beautiful, almost without excention. But even when they are not beautiful they come freighted with feelings that go way beyond esthetics. They stand, in fact, for continuity, for survival, for beliefs and traditions that have passed through the fire many then H.L. Latham, an editor at the Macmillan Company was scouting for new anthors in Atlanta in 1935, he was advised to seek out Peggy Mitchell, a former feature writer for the Atlanta Journal Sunday Magazine. She at first insisted that she had no novel or other work to show him, but a few hours before Latham left Atlanta, as he later recalled, "the telephone in my hotel room rang and Miss Mitchell's voice came to me over it, informing me that she was downstairs in the lobby and would like to see me. I went down, and I shall never forget the picture I have of Margaret Mitchell as I then saw her — a tiny woman sitting on a divan, and beside her the biggest manuscript I have ever seen, tow-ering in two stacks almost up to her shoul-ders "

"Gone With the Wind" - Latham saw at once that it was "a very significant novel of the South" — sold 178,000 copies within three weeks of publication on June 30, 1936 — unheard of before or since, for a first novel by an unknown. In July, it was the main selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club, then in its 11th year.

The novel was on the best-seller list for 21 consecutive months; hy the time it dropped off in April 1938, two million copies had been sold. Macy's department store alone had bought 50,000 copies at once, in 1936.

While the earlier great classic of the South, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was out of print by the late 19th century, today, 50 years after publication, "Gone With the Wind" still sells about 250,000 copies a year in the United States, and 100,000 around the world. In virtually every one of those years, more than 40,000 hardback were sold. By 1983 there were at copies least 185 editions in print, and 25 million copies had been sold in 27 languages and 37 countries. None of that counts pirated editions, which have been numerous.

Movie rights to "Gone With the Wind" were sold a month after publication, to David O. Selznick, for $50,000 — an im-mense sum in the depths of the Depression. The public followed Selznick's wellpublicized search for the right cast as if it were a presidential election, and the premiere in Atlanta ou Dec. 16, 1939, at Loew's Grand - with four Confo veterans in attendance - was a national event. When the film opened in Boston, the spiritual and political center of opposition to an Old Sooth that was "gone with the wind" in all hut myth, 17,000 people bought tickets the first day, box office lines forming at 6 A.M. I was then 13 years old, but I well remember riding with my mother and sister on a local train derisively called the Boll Weevil along the old Seaboard Air Line Railway to Charlotte, North Carolina, where at the Carolina Theatre on Tyron Street we had mail-order tickets for the great event. Every seat was taken, though the movie had been showing for weeks. I loved it, and have every time I've seen it since - most recently on a video cassette recorder in preparation for writ-ing this article. And I'm not alone. The film "Gone With the Wind" has had more viewers, in one way or another, than the come up with nothing that was not complete, and sane, and hallowed. The Jewish Museum's holdings of Judaica have no equal in the Western Hemisphere, and the exhibition ranges lightly in time and place from marbles incised in Rome in the first century A.D. to a Jewish New Year's greeting carved by an Eskimo in Alaska in 1910. The Jewish Museum also has a collection of paintings, sculptures, drawings and prints that could form the nucleus of a traditional art gallery, if that were fundamental to its ambitions. Necessarily rather mixed, it ranges from etchings by Rembrandt to paintings by Chaim Soutine, Marc Chagali, Adolph Gottlich, Jacques-Emile Blanche, Boris Schatz and Ben Shahn and sculptures by Jacques Lipchitz, George Segal, Benni Efrat and Leonard Baskin. Treasures of the Jewish Museum" will be on view until well into 1987. (NYT) can find Rhett Butler statuettes, Scarlett O'Hara dolls, a Scarlett board game, "Gone With the Wind" handkerchiefs, cookbooks and sketches, as well as recipes for Scarlett and Rhett cocktails. A longrunning all-female musical revue version can be seen in Tokyo.

What accounts for all this? No doubt readers in the '30s were tired of the Depression, wanted escape and saw some parallels between the downfall of the Old South and their own lost johs, houses, wealth and status. The Civil War, morehlend of solid journalism, dogged research, and personal fantasizing," and it has been denigrated variously for its freover, remains the most dramatic episode in American history, one for which there is a continuous andience of readers and buffs. Years ago I told James Street, a distant kinship with the rough frontier culture of George Harris's "Sut Lovinprolific novelist and short-story writer and a student of the literary marketplace, that 1 wanted to write a novel about the Amerigood" (1867) or Augustus Baldwin Longcan Revolution. He literally shook his fin-

Indeed, after a first rush descension, although in many cases with of enthusiasm in the literary community of great affection; she did not incorporate in the late '30s, critics have generally downgraded the book's merit. Daniel Aaron in "The Unwritten War," called it "that her writing such white conceits as her description of Big Sam, the freed black, "who glowed with relief at once more having someone tell him what to do." Most of her black characters are childlike or villainous, with the notable exception of Mammv.

These charges are mostly fair enough,

But it should be remembered that Margaret Mitchell was born in 1900, when the Civil War was barely 35 years in the past and Reconstruction was even more recent. She began work on her novel in 1926 ("It stinks and I don't know why I bother with it," she told a friend, "but I've got to do something with my time"), when first-generation descendants of the war and postwar years were all about her and the South itself was by no means economically or politically recovered from those years. The modern civil rights movement was a quarter-century in the future when she bagan "Gone With the Wind" and was still undreamed of when Macmillan published it (with no recorded racial qualms).

Mitchell was a child of her time, not ours, and is unfairly judged by the '70s or '80s view of racism. And anyway, her book's major transgressions on this point are those of white Southerners in the post-Civil War years. Her depiction of racial attitudes in postwar South seems accurate enough; and she should hardly be charged with both prettying up the antebellum making what be claims is the world's biggest sculpture. For once it will not be in Texas, although Venet has projects for Dallas and Fort Worth as well, hut 140 kilometers from Paris, on the main autoroute to the south.

Departing vacationers this summer will only see two concrete stan-chions on either side of the highway, but, if all goes according to plan, when they return to Paris they will pass through the embrace of Venet's graceful steel arc, which will be seen from a distance of six kilometers almost four miles) and which stands 53 meters (175 feet) high.

There isn't much highway sculpture anywhere. "The problem is how do you deal with the highway, which is very large. Also, people don't stop when they see it, which means it cannot be of human size." Venet says. The arc will be seen by 35 million motorists a year and some of them, Venet reckons, will say, "What the hell, it's only two pieces of steel." Venet first thought of the highway sculpture about mine years ago when he started making arcs: "I was looking at a sculpture sitting on a table and thinking my God what about a highway passing into it, it would be beautiful. Then I thought it's such a crazy idea, such a otopian idea, better forget it Bernar, it's not for you." (Bernar dropped the final "d" from his first name some years hack because he felt it had no use.)

Having decided the idea was not for him, he then decided that it was, but not simply because of the project's size. "Because it is the highest sculoture in the world doesn't necessarily make it a good work of art. It just happened; the size of the highway dictated its size."

Venet, lanky and fairly bursting with confidence and vim, was born in Provence in 1941 and moved in 1966 to New York, where he now works in proper New York artist style with a secretary and an assistant in a huge loft with a view of the Hudson. A critic describes his work as "brutally basic - like a Euclidean theorem or a linguistic problem."

This Saturday, two Venet shows, works from 1966 and from 1986, open at the most New Yorkish of Paris galleries. Daniel Templon.

Venet spends more time on discourse than on producing: One might say he talks a great work of art. He lectured at the Sorbonne, where his audience had to have baccalaureat degrees. Venet failed his bar. He also failed to be accepted as a student by the Beaux Arts in Nice, where he thinks he probably had little to learn anyway. His life as a working artist began while he was doing his military service at Tarascon, where the army had loss of unused space that today would be called lofts. "I went to the sergeant and I said I need to paint. He said why don't you ask the captain. So I went to the captain who sent me to see the colonel. I said, my colonel, 1 am a painter in the civil. Not only that but I Bernet working on the world's largest sculpture. as a soldier but in my free time 1 have to paint. He says oh, what do you world. When I show a weather map —usually a painter is going to paint a high! It's crazy."

ARIS-The New York-based French artist Bernar Venet is paint? I said you are not going to take me very seriously but I paint with making what be claims is the world's biggest sculpture. For once my feet. I pour some tar on the canvas and make it splatsh. He said are you making fun of me? I said no, no, no. You see there is Jackson Pollock, Franz Kline, de Kooning. You know about Picasso probably, but art history has been going on. 1 am very serious, I have to do that. He said O.K., I'll give you space. That's how I got my loft, and for ten months I was doing only that."

The 12 paintings were, as a critic later noted, Venet's most plastic works. In New York in 1966 he discovered the Minimalists and began making tubes with one end, both, or sometimes neither, cut on the bias.

MARY BLUME

He then went on to what he regards as his major contribution: mathematical diagrams on paper with such titles as "An Iterative Procedure for Computing the Maximal Root of a Positive Matrix."

"I began using mathematics because it was a new field of investigation, a new kind of image that had not been exploited before.* Infinenced by semiotics, he described paintings as visual messages and adapted the three categories worked out by Jacques Bertin in France: "In the visual world there are three different types of images with three different functions," Venet says. "Some are figurative, some abstract and some are diagrams. The figurative is different from the abstract image because you recognize something immediately - that's why I call them polysemic. they are open to a certain amount of interpretation. If you put an abstract painting in front of ten people, everybody's going to come up with a their own ideas - one will say that means sadness, another will say it's a mountain or whatever. That's why we call them pansemic. A mathematical diagram is monosemic because it has only one level of significance. It is supposed to give a very precise idea. So in starting to investigate this field of mathematical diagrams I really introduced in the field of art a new kind of image. This only tells you the difference between my work and everything that was done in the past. And my diagrams which are today in museums - the Guggenheim, the Museum of Modern Art, everywhere they are today accepted as art and before that nobody thought it was possible

From the mathematical diagrams Venet went on to huge photographic enlargements of newspaper and magazine pages. He specialized in financial tables ("New 1969 Highs and Lows" was one title) and weather reports, and for one year he reproduced the weekly Newsweek financial column of the astonished Clem Margello. "We became good friends but landscape the way he feels it. My landscape is the landscape of a certain place that day at that time. I give objective information instead of a subjective interpretation of the world."

The height of objective information was probably reached when Venet ... exhibited cassettes of mathematics professors talking. "The tapes were" very boring, no one could understand them. But you know art is not ' necessarily to make you feel good or to distract you. I had to do it, I did it, sold two or three."

From 1967 Venet set himself an annual study program in which he received tuition in subjects ranging from astrophysics to sociology. In 1970, at the end of his plan and after his first New York retrospective, he withdrew for a further six years of study, analysis and explication. When he returned to producing, he devoted himself to the line, as he still does — the line as an angle, the line as an arc, and what he calls undetermined lines, which look like coiled rope.

He spends a lot of time lecturing, explaining himself. "I love to give lectures, I prefer to lecture than to sell a work of art because I take art very seriously, like a religion. I think it is more important for people to understand what art is about than to add the work of art to the wall to decorate their apartment. When a work of art is radical, the artist has a strong need to explain what the work is about. Kandinsky needed to use

Venet has said that a contemporary work of art has no value unless it. advances the idea of art, a view both hubristic and stringent. "To do a good painting is not the most difficult, to do a good sculpture is not very difficult, you just have to practice. But people don't realize how difficult it is to create a new image. I could do sculptures like Picasso or Brancusi or Rodin and I would not deserve to be called a great artist. And I have that pretension. Only time will tell."

While time ticks, Venet is certainly great in terms of the sheer size of such works as the autoroute arc. He is excited about his monumental . works not only because they continue the mathematical approach that he considers his revolutionary contribution to art, but also because, as he says, "I am not going to be very modest. First, as a sculptor I am very new, - my first big piece was 1983, yesterday! Not all sculptors can do monumental works and there is a great demand. In America there is a lot to do, especially with those gigantic buildings, to add something to their image. It's a very simple thing. Everyone's doing a huilding but if yoo' have something cultural next to it, you will have a better image. It's becoming a new product that gives you prestige. There are some artists that can do big things, but how many, and how many good ones?

"My range of possibilities is very large," Venet confides. "Right now I have a big contract with a gallery in Paris, which was not rule at all, and I he never understood what I was doing. "When you have these numbers and working on a sculpture — I can tell you but do not ask me a question must paint otherwise it is borrible for my career. I am going to do my job it's an image but it's also objective information about a situation in the about it, you are the first person I say it to. The sculpture is 150 meters

Boom Market in Ancient Egyptian Art

EW YORK — The irresistible ascent of Egyptian anoquities reached yet another climax when Southeby's held its usual spring sale of antiquities on May 30.

A monumental granite figure of Sekhmet, the liones-headed goddess, which Sotheby's had hoped to sell in the $400,000-600,000 bracket, was knocked down at $675,000 — $742,500 with premium. The price, which set a world record for Egyptian art, is breathtaking on several counts. It shows some severe damage, and while no one expects a work dated to the reign of Amenhotep III in the 14th century B.C. to be in mint condition, this affects the visual impact of the piece. Sotheby's expert, Richard M. Keresey, notes in his entry that "at least five hundred statues of Sekhmet, goddess of war and protector of the king, are known to have lined the courts of the temple Amenhotep III built for [the god] Amun's consort Mut . . . at Thebes, and some still stand in the remains of the ruined complex." The sight must have been overwhelming and, perhaps, imagining it all prompted the potential buyers to give it an extra bid or so.

But in the last 13 years or so, collectors and insolutions must have been less romantically inclined: According to a leading European dealer, who preferred to remain anonymous, the Egyptian Sekhmet, offered as part of the estate of John Lennon, had been for sale since 1973 at prices ranging from $150,000 to $800,000.

If confirmed, such a long past of failed attempts to sell could have killed the object. It would have in the days when the dearth of art for sale was less marked and when the awareness of historic associations played a limited role in the market. Major museums with important Egyptian boldings would not have considered a damaged piece and minor museums with little or no Egyptian art would not have bothered about buying one big expensive statue. Now everything has changed. The association of the Sekhmet statue with Thebes and the 18th dynasty one of the two capitals of ancient Egypt and a pivotal dynasty in the history of the king-dom — must have weighed heavily in the minds of bidders.

Keresey remarks that the name of Amenhotep in the throne inscription bears winess to his successor Akhenaton's attempt to expunge every occurence of Amun's name. Amenhotep's name was subsequently restored, "presumably during the reign of Tut-ankhamen, under whom the cult of Amun regained its former eminence." That discreet reference to Akhenaton's revolutionary slant toward quasi monotheism and Tutankhamen's conservative reaction after his father's death may have boosted the sale with its historical perspective. The bidding match that resulted between an agent for Seijiro Matsuoka, the Japanese collector, and the unidentified telephone bidder who got it, could not have taken place 10 years ago: Private Japanese buyers did not venture anywhere near such financial heights so far away from their beaten paths. Such a large and damaged piece was little more than a white elephant, rare but undesired. This has been changed by the sprouting of new museums with the art of ancient Egypt on their shopping lists.

Their enthusiasm is catching and contaminates the older institutions. It is doubtful that the portrait of a Hellenistic prince carved in Alexandria in the first century B.C. would have realized $40,700 a few years ago. This is a mere fragment. The back of the head, one car and the nose are missing. True, the portrait is of extraordinary vigor. The quality of carving points to a Greek artist. The highly individualized features led Keresey to identify it as Ptolemy XIL, while others have previously seen it as the portrait of Ptolemy VIII. The marble was acquired by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Such a late piece in such poor condition would, again, have failed to stir enthusiasm a few years ago. It surprised even Sotheby's as it doubled the high estimate.

Nor was this an isolated case. A beautiful granite torso of a Prophet of Isis, datable to around 325-282 B.C., went up to $36,300, paid by Heide Van Doren-Betz, of Van Doren Associates of San Francisco. Compared with that, the $82,500 given by the same dealer for a wood figure of the god Osiris seems almost reasonable. Datable to the 26th dynasty (664-525 B.C.), the statue, 42 inches (107 centimeters) high, retains the hierade quality of earlier art.

Only one among the more remarkable specimens of Egyptian art was relatively financially accessible. This is an eight-inchhigh fragment, a hlack schist torso of a man, once the upper part of a standing figure. Datable to the sixth century B.C., according to Keresey, it betrays, under the stylization inherited from ancient Egypt, the new search for expressiveness that came into Egyptian art with Westernization. This suggests that it face is an unforgettable portrait. Sold at Sotheby's New York on Dec. 9, 1981 for $14,300, it realized only $13,200 this time.

A single piece of Egyptian jewelry of the Ptolemaic period went through the roof after intense competition. Elegant as it may be with its twisted extremities terminated with snake heads, oo one had expected it to virtually double Sotheby's high estimate. It was sold for $37,400 to Diana D. Brooks, Sotheby's North American executive vice president on behalf of a friend to whom she was speaking on the telephone.

The enormous prices paid for the top loss of Egyptian art contrasted with the generally sober pace of the auction. Marble carvings did well, as in all recent sales. A headless figure described as that of a "goddess" dooe in the best Greek style of the first or second century went up to $15,950, more than the high estimate but just about the price it would have made in any Paris spring sale.

Among other works of art from the ancient world, one object went through the roof — an Atoe red-figure cup datable to about 480 B.C., which has been attributed by a world authority on the subject, J.D. Beazley, to a painter called Douris. Formerly owned by the late Professor Jakob Rosenberg of Cambridge. Massachusetts, it had long been oo loan to the Fogg Art Museum. The distinguished Hellenist and Metropoli-tan Museum curator of Greek and Roman art, Dietrich von Bothmer, who studied under Beazley, was sitting in the front row next to Marian True, curator of Ancient Art at the Paul Getty Museum, and their comhined art with Westernization. This suggests that it presence may have contributed to the phe-might be more recent by a century or so. The comenal $45,100 paid for the small piece.

Though the queen bought oeither of them, her interest encouraged commissions from Lord Egerton and the duchess of Sutherland, and led to Hensel's return to England in 1843, with a commission from the king of Prussia to paint a portrait of the baby Albert Edward, Prince of Wales (much later Edward VII), a painting still in the royal collec-tion and loaned to the exhibition.

At the same time Hensel made a oumber of pencil portraits of the prince, some of which are in the show, which is divided into five categories - the Hensel and Mendels-

Le Cid's 350 Years in Performance

by Thomas Quinn Curtiss

ARIS - Of all the plays, classic and contemporary, in the French repertory, oone has aroused more lasting audience appreciation than Cor-neille's "Le Cid," which was first performed 350 years ago.

Its history is imposing evidence of its enduring popularity. It entered the repertory of the Comédie-Française in the first week of that company's existence, in 1680, and succeeding generations of the troupe's members have played it 1,625 times, while thousands of actors and actresses have been doing it on other boards for more than three centuries.

In the post-World War II era the legendary Gérard Philipe won his threatrical spurs as its dashing superman, and his recitations of its tirades, some tender and some thundering, have been preserved in recordings to be taught as histrionic training. This season it achieved its longest run of consecutive per-formances at the Théâtre du Rond-Point, where the rising star, Francis Huster, direct-ed and took its leading role, with the veter-ans Jean Marais as the bewhiskered patriarch and Jean-Louis Barrault as the maganimous monarch in support. This engagement, just concluded and to be resumed next season by public demand, filled the theater nightly to emerge as the prime achievement of the Paris theater season.

William Dean Howells once remarked that Americans prefer tragedies with happy endings. So do the French - at least on occasion - as Corneille was aware.

As a young barrister in Rouen, where he was born 380 years ago - on June 6, 1606 -Pierre Corneille was converted from the law to the theater by a visit the Théâtre du Marais troupe paid to the town. In his spare hours he penned farces and one of these, "Mélite," he submitted to the company, which obligingly performed it in Paris. It was his study of the prolific Spanish dramatist, Lope de Vega, and of Guillén de Castro's chronicles of Spain's national hero, that in-spired him to write "Le Cid."

The Aristotelian dictum that a drama must transpire in a single locality during a single day ruled French dramaturgy at that time. To restrict his rampaging romance to the sacred law of dramatic unities was a problem that he strained to solve. Here was a truly Corneillian dilemma

In his play Rodrigue, betrothed to Chi-mène, is forced into a duel with her father and slays him. He escapes punishment by repelling the invading Moorish army and on his return is greeted at the court as his country's savior, while his fiancée demands his death for the slaying of her father. A subplot troubles him further, but before the final curtain he is promoted to the nobility, pardoned and married to his lady love -- all this within 24 hours.

It was Proust's contention that every great work of art inevitably contains a broad streak of the ridiculous and therefore, like a strong face, is easy to caricature. Certainly this masterpiece defies cool reasoning, logic and plausibility again and again. Spectators of the 17th century, like spectators today, must have wondered why, after Chimène has demanded Rodrigue's execution, he still insists on marrying her.

Scene after scene in the text foreshadows the modern theater of the absurd with its inexplicable incidents. It does not echo

Greek tragedy, with its sense of predestined doom hovering over the dramatis personae. It is a pacan to the spirit of youth, free and unafraid, impatient for love, adventure and the fray, confident of its invincibility.

The initial performance dazzled its pre-miere andience and Cornelle was famous overnight. However, Cardinal Richelieu, who had founded the Academic Française to guide literature as he guided the nation, disapproved. The play did oot subscribe to Aristotle's rules despite the limiting of its feverish action to one locality and one day, Its extravagant story, bulging with storm and stress, failed to fit the traditional frame.

against the work, ordering his pedantic and envious staff to condemn the drama on grounds of taste, morals and composition.

Richelieu fancied himself as an artist and a critic of infallible judgment. He was anxious to regiment the arts as well as his countrymen. He was a thwarted playwright himself and nothing of his "creative" endeavors has survived, though as a personality play-wrights have made use of him. He is the villain in "The Three Musketeers," received more gentle consideration from Lord Lytton in "The Conspiracy," and the unkindest cut of all, thanks to the Legion of Decency, when he was deprived of his prince-of-the-church robes in a Hollywood movie.

He continued to bedevil Corneille, who returned to Ronen to write plays in peace. But he did permit Corneille's election to the Académie, a gesture of truce rather than a pardon.

After the mighty stateman's death Pope Urban VIII declared: "If there be a God, Cardinal Richelieu will have much to answer for. If there be none, why he lived a successful life."

There is a curious history coocerning his remains that suggests macabre drama. The cardinal was buried in a marble tomb in the chapel of the Sorbonne. During the Revolution, the grave was rifled and a butcher boy stole his embalmed head. It had many adventures, but in this century it was purchased from its last collector and now, reat-tached, lies at rest. Here is stuff for some surrealistic dramatist, prehaps Arrabal. There is a French saying, "As beautiful as the Cid," which attests to Corneille's immortality. He wrote the first great French drama, a passion-tossed tale of lovers who challenge impossible odds and conquer all. The sweet music of youth's daring and triumph is welcomed by each generation in turn. That is the secret of "Le Cid."

of shifting mentalities momentarily settled into a new position. So 20 years can be considered a lapse of time sufficient to begin taking stock. The Surrealist exhibi-tion in Marseille affords an opportunity of doing so, and so does the smaller but equally interesting one presented in Paris by Artcurial.

The show includes the predictable selection of Dali, Miró, Masson, Tanguy, Ernst, Matta and Lam, along with less familiar works by younger or less known members of the movement. It also presents an interesting selection of documents and objects that belonged to Breton, the central figure of this exhibition, as well as of the book by Jose Pierre, which lent the show its title and serves as catalog. Recurrent patterns only appear in hindsight. And one of the dominant patterns of 20th-century art has been the stubborn attempt, apparent in all the art movements of the last century, to find a modus vivendi with the "rationalist" world view or, more exactly, to preserve the purely poetie and cultural values in the face of a new mentality that had no use for them.

At the end of the 19th century, the Symbolists, confronted with this same problem, had withdrawn into a private sanctum. The Foturists rejected this solution in 1909 and rushed headlong into the industrial age, determined to find a cure in the disease itself. A 1946 statement by Breton shows that his movement was, in effect, grappling with the same problem: "The only way a European artist of the 20th century can correct the effects of rationalism and utilitarianism which have dried up the springs of inspiration, is to return to the so-called primitive view — a synthesis of sensory perception and mental representation."

But he failed to perceive a truth that was obvious to the 11th-century Islamic philosopher, al-Ghazali: "There is no hope in returning to a traditional faith after it has once been abandoned, since the essential condition in the holder of a traditional faith is that he should oot know he is a traditionalist." A return to the "primitive" might have appeared to be a solution at that time — it was impossible conetheless for the reason given by al-Ghazali. But other ways exist.

Basically, Breton's assumptions reflect a perception of the symbolic import of all good art of the past. This sort of symbolism was of course more than a mere conventional code, it served to give utterance to conceptions and statements about man's place in the world -- the desirable goals of his actions and the artist's problems. But these are nobody's concern but of significance, and of poetic intensity too, which all nature of the ultimate Good. South and not prettying up the Reconstruction South. More than any of these flaws, though, the popularity of "Gone With the Wind" may have occasioned enticism on the grounds that any book so loved by so many, numerous critics have apparently thought, can be on more than a heavy-breathing potboiler unworthy of serious notice. For me, however, what makes a good novel is a good story well told - a story, moreover, that means something to the reader, a narrative that grips and informs, not as pedagogy but as enlargement of understanding.

The story of how Scarlett O'Hara survives the Civil War and its altermath - how she overcomes poverty, violence, sexual and social barriers, the collapse of a familiar world, to prosper materially but at high personal cust in a new and harsh environment - is more than an contralling tale. It develops the familiar American, indeed biblical, theme that riches can be empty, and addresses the question, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Not that Scarlett, even when she loses Rhett just as she finally understands she wants him most, is ever less than indomitable: "She could get Rhett back. She knew she could. There had never been a man she couldn't get, once she set her mind upon him." For his part, clear-red Rhett has seen her all along for what she is: "No, I don't love you but I do like you tremendously -- for the elasticity of your conscience, for the refishness you seldom trouble to hide, and for the shrewd practicality in you, which, I fear, you get from some not too remote Irish-peasant Incestor,"

That speech is a little stilled, as Mitchell's dialogue - especially for male characters - tends to be. But who could fail to respond to such a herome - and in her courage and spirit, her vanity, her weaknesses, her bardheadedness Scarlett is a fully realized heroine - or to the man who and andge her so well and yet be willing to wait for her longer "than I've ever waited for any woman ??

For Rhett and Scarlett are anything but stick figures. They are people of depth, dimension, intensity, who may have "played such tricks before high heaven as make the angels weep" but about whom we therefore care

But if the story and characters of "Gone With the Wind" are endlessly all the more. interesting and solidly naved in a dramatic history, if the canvas is broad and detailed, the incidents rich in the variety and drama of life, in what way does the nevel meet the other half of the carrative standard? How Witten offered a tather strained answer to "Patriotic Gore": "Having Frankly My Dear, I Don't Give a Damn! the start between the Jeffersonian ideal of an agrarian America free of the infections of big cities and large commerce, and the insatiable drive for industry, money, power. These polar views — south and north, so to speak — came to symbolize the opposing sides in the Civil War as well as the conflicting interests of Americans generally. Never mind the reality behind the myth, or that to the extent such a South ever existed it rested on human slavery; the enduring popularity of "Gone With the Wind," it seems to me, owes less to the Southern myth itself than to the sense of loss the myth inevitably inspires.

Margaret Mitchell told H.L. Latham that she had wanted to write about "people who fought things through to success, as well as those who went down valiantly in the struggle, or who managed just to exist - Georgians who did come through, and Georgians who didn't." And in the novel she produced, the characters like Scarlett O'Hara who did "come through" suffered perhaps the greatest losses - not only loved ones, a way of life, an old, prehaps imagined security, but a sense of themselves. In those hard years of war and reconstruction, such losses were definable, even perhaps measurable. In our time, loss may not be so well understood, but the sense of loss - of youth, of innocence, of faith, of confidence, of the hope for a better tomorrow that will surely come, of something ineffable we thought we had a right to expect - is at the heart of American life.

That's why "Gone With the Wind" touches us so deeply, and has through the decades, and probably will continue to do so. That's what it means to us. For the idea of loss is also at the heart of the novel. It's harder for most of us than it was for Scarlett O'Hara to believe that "tomorrow is another day," that somehow, tomorrow, we can recover what we've paid out — that, as she told herself about Rhett, surely she could "think of some way to get him back." It may be that few of us have Scarlett's will, her irrepressible spirit. But prehaps too, the sense of loss within us is the greater, the will to recover the weaker, because we cannot as certainly know what it is that's been lost in our America.

This was adapted by The New York Times Book Review from the introduction to the Book-of-the-Month Chub's forthcoming anniversary edition of "Gone With the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell Tom Wicker is on the staff of the New York Times devastated the fendal South, the Northerners wanted to be told of its glamour, of its old-time courtesy and grace. . . . A rush of industrial development had come at the end of the war, and the cities of the North and the West, now the scene of so much energetic enterprise which rendered them uglier and harsher, were losing their old amenities; and the Northerners wanted, besides, a little to make it up to the South for their wartime vituperation. They took over the Southern myth and themselves began to revel in it. This acceptance was to culminate in "Gone With the Wind," the enormous success of which novel makes a curious counterbalance to that of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Well, the "Southern myth" certainly is a presence in the American psyche — the idea that in the antebellam South there had been, as Rheu Butler puts it in his parting scene with Scarlett, "the clannishness of families, honor and security, roots that go deep . . . the calm dignity that life can have when it's lived by gentle folks, the genial grace of days that are gone."

That myth persists, and strikes a chord in a people divided almost from

The name Atlanta, a reference to Western and Atlantic Railroad, is given to the site of the southern terminus of a rail link to the North. The city is set to become the principal inland transpor-tation center of the Old South.

Defeat, Destruction On Sept. 2, 1864. Federal troops takeover the city. By November, much has been burned, and General W. T. Sherman leaves on his "march to the sea."

1895: City Rises Again

After the Civil War, Atlanta epitomizes the spirit of the New South, advocating reconciliation with the North to > restore business. A black educator, Booker T. Washington, urges blacks to seek economic security before political or social equality. Other blacks reject Washington this approach.

City Finds Racial Harmony Pays Off

By Art Harris

TLANTA - A Chinese journalist, exploring racial progress in this booming capital of the New South, was somewhat taken aback on a recent outting to a popular restaurant set in a converted slave quarters. A young black boy, the menu board about his neck, began chanting dinner items. Soon, a black waitress, all gussied up in plantation-chic a la Prissy in "Gone With The Wind," served up fried chicken, collard greens and corn bread, tasty regional specialties

"I'm afraid he thinks you're a slave," said the bost, as the bemused waitress tried to unravel cultural confusion by confessing ber generous wage: $12 an hour, which included tips. Now the visitor was doubly perplexed. Imagine, slaves making so much money. "We make nice money, we make nice tips," laughed Jo Ann Trimble, 35. "But this isn't about slavery. This is about freedom."

Of course, Aunt Fanny's Cabin is pure Tara time warp in the Dixie suburbs, fantasy in Magnolialand, where the South is finally learning to laugh at itself and bury old taboos in a city that bills itself as "too busy to hate." The slogan was launched by the Chamber of Commerce in the turbulent 1960s to tout the racial harmony Atlanta enjoyed when other Soutbern cities were erupting in violence over school desegregation. If nothing else, Atlanta remains a proud city obsessed with its image, and its leaders, black and white, always believed that thrashing out conflicts across a table beat the streets.

Indeed, Atlanta likes to boast that it did its integrating peacefully, with leaders of both races concurring that riots would be bad for commerce in a forward-thinking city that one political cynic calls "too greedy to be stupid." Somehow, it beld together during the tense 1960s, the black political takeover of the 1970s and the recent series of murders of 28 black children. Prosperity was always the bottom line.

There was an understanding between black leaders and the downtown business establishment that good race relations were good for business," said John Lewis, a city councilman and a black civil rights hero once beaten on an Alabama march.

And now that blacks like Mr. Lewis wield the political power in this majority black city, the driving force in Atlanta remains enlightened self-interest, with Mayor Andrew Young playing dual roles as cheerleader and referee, playing dual roles as cheenesder and referee, even as he preaches a gospel of boosterism, unfettered growth and golden opportunity.
"My job," he said, "is to see that whites get some of the power and blacks get some of the money." As the second black mayor, he is

TLANTA --- When state highway engincers set out seven years ago, the $1.3-billion project to widen Atlan-13's freeways was the biggest of its kind in the United States, a one-time fix designed to unclog a road system that this booming Southern capital had badly outgrown. Now, even before the work has been finished, crews will have to start some of it over. Not only must they widen, again, one grid-locked stretch of a suburban freeway, but the Atlanta City Council recently endorsed a controversial plan to build another 6-mile (9.6kilometer) expressway spur to relieve growing traffic pressure on the city's prosperous northzide.

Like the construction crane and the wrecking ball, the highway detour sign has replaced the dogwood blossom as a kind of contempo-rary symbol of Atlanta, the financial, com-mercial and political heart of the New South. Since 1960, the population of the 15-county Atlanta metropolitan area has more than doubled, to 2.4 million residents. The Atlanta Regional Council says that it will reach three million before the end of the century. Atlanta's growth has been fueled not only by its evolution as the crossroads of the South, the historical intersection of important rail and road and airline routes, but also by a long-standing determination among its civic and political leadership not to let the region's abiding racial differences get in the way of progre

In the 1950s and 1960s, when the civil rights movement was challenging the old order across the South, Atlanta called itself "the city too busy to hate." With the help of local blacks like the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., civic leaders set out to dismantle the legal barriers of segregation with little of the disruption and none of the violence that occurred elsewhere in the region.

The gospel that preached accommodation rather than confrontation worked some pow-erful truths. While police set dogs on demon-strators in Birmingham, Alabama, recalled Mayor Andrew Young, Atlanta's leaders were buying up the land to build what soon became the nation's second busiest airport.

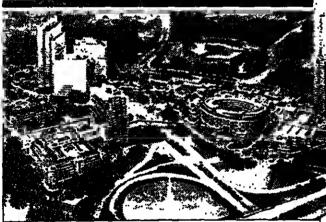

Atlanta is not color-blind. Because many whites have fled the city, it is now blacker and poorer than it was a generation ago; blacks make up two-thirds of the city's population. The school system has only 7 percent white enrollment among its 67,000 pupils. Neighborhoods are, for the most part, segregated: Blacks live to the south and the west of the center city, whites to the north and east. And as much as 28 percent of the population is below the poverty line, Still, the city has become for blacks a kind of national beacon of political and economic opportunity, a place where racial tensions example, in Chicago, Detroit or Boston. "Race is still a problem in Atlanta," said Mr. Young, who is serving his second term as mayor. "But the difference in Atlanta is that we admit it, we talk about it, and we deal with it on top of the table." While the city's skyline of glass and steel skyscrapers does not seem so different from those of Dallas or Denver or any of the other new citadels of the Sunbelt economy, there is much about the city that remains enduringly Southern,

The mythology of the Old South gives flavor to the city. Conventioneers and visitors still arrive in search of Tara, the fictional plantation estate that will be celebrated this month when Atlanta marks the 50th anniversary of the publication of "Gone with the Wind," the epie novel by Atlantan Margaret Mitchell.

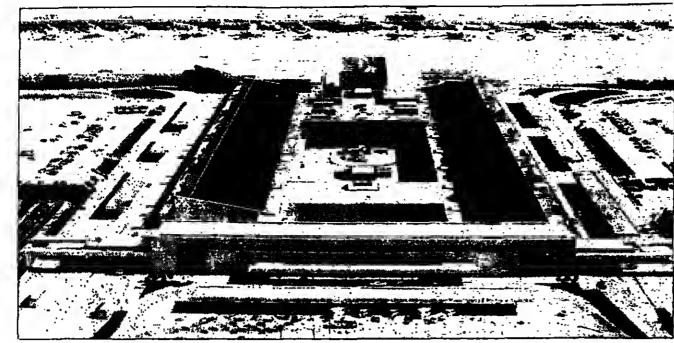

But like the old apartment blocks on Peachtree Street that fall to make way for new office towers, the prevailing mood in Atlanta sometimes seems to evince little patience for the city's past.

th its sleek rapid transit trains and booming convention trade (the city is angling for both the Republican and Democratic conventions in 1988), Atlanta is more than just Coca-Cola these days. It is a city obsessed with progress, where the local beroes include Ted Turner, the brash entrepreneur whose Cable News Network has redefined television news, and John C. Portman Jr., the architect who gave new meaning to the notion of inner space by creating hotels with soaring atriums and glass bubble elevators.

The most dramatic growth has occurred outside the city limits of Atlanta, which counts only about 450,000 residents, or about a fifth of the metropolitan population. To the northeast of the city, Gwinnett County is the fastest growing community in the nation, its population of 251,000 larger by more than 50 percent than just five years ago.

Last year alone, across the Atlanta metropolitan area, 226 new companies moved in and announced plans to build 515 projects worth $12.3 billion. In 1984, there were 100,000 new jobs added in the area, 9 percent more than 1983. Last year, there were 78,000 new jobs created, and unemployment this spring stands at only 4.4 percent.

Atlanta Hartsfield International Airport: The connection for 966 foreign-based companies in Georgia.

The South's Gateway to World

By Maria Saporta

TLANTA - Once a parochial Southern town, Atlanta has matured into a thriving center of international commerce serving the southeastern United States.

In only a decade, Atlanta has blossomed into a city with 28 foreign-based banks, 51 weekly trans-Atlantic flights and bundreds of international companies

On July 2, the city will get its first direct air connection to the Far East when Japan Alr Lines begins flights between Atlanta and To-kyo with a refueling stop in Seattle. The city's leaders believe the Japanese connection will round out its role as an international business center.

In addition, the Atlanta-based Delta Airlines is a leading contender to win rights to fly to Tokyo. The U.S. Department of Transportation is expected to decide later this summer wbether Delta can have five weekly flights from Atlanta to Tokyo via Portland. Oregon, eginning in the fall. "With the direct flights to Tokyo, I think the new growth area will be the Far East connection," said Tom Harrold, an Atlanta attorney who works solely with international business clients. "That will include not only Japan, but Korea running a close second. And a lot of passive investment will come out of Hong Kong and trading opportunities will come out of Singapore and Indonesia."

Japan Air Lines selected Atlanta largely because of the existing Japanese presence io Atlanta and the state of Georgia. State officials claim that Georgia has more Japanese companies than any state other than California. And recently, Japanese investment in Georgia bas accelerated.

In late May, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Ltd. announced plans to build a $20million plant manufacturing car audio equipment in the south metropolitan area of Atlanta. The plant is expected to employ 800 people within three years of operation. Matsushita, which manufactures consumer electronic products under the brand names of Panasonic. Technics. Quasar and National. picked its location because of the Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport, Southern bospitality, proximity of raw materials and the availability of skilled workers. It joins 158 other Japanese companies and 966 foreign-based companies that have located in Georgia.

The growth of foreign-based companies has been dramatic. In 1975, there were only 150. After Japan, Britain has the most companies in the state and British companies employ more Georgians - 14,140 - than other foreign-based investors. Barry Holmes, the British consul general in Atlanta, said of Georgia: "It's got the climate. It's got the communication. It's got a skilled work force, and very importantly, it has a noounionized labor force, and British companies have had problems with unions."

Canadian companies have invested $953 million in the state, making it the leading foreign investor. West Germany, the Nether-lands, France and Swedeo have also invested beavily.

The international growth in Atlanta really began between 1975 and 1980, when "a combination of many things happened at the same time," Mayor Andrew Young said. Although he credits the Coca-Cola Co. for laying an international foundation for the city, Atlanta was in the spotlight during the 1970s for other

The election of Jimmy Carter as president in 1976 generated interest in the New South and in Mr. Carter's home state. Georgia had a progressive governor. George Busbee, who took advantage of the state's new image by going on international trade missions and changing banking legislation to permit for-eign banks. "Suddenly Georgia not only had the visibility, but it had a team at every level to implement the vision of an international city." Mr. Young said.

A banking law passed in 1976 permitted foreign-based banks to book loans in the state. International banks flocked to Atlanta.

nce the banking law was changed. state and city officials began lobbying to have the Atlanta airport designated as a trans-Atlantic gateway. Although there was opposition from existing gateways, Mr. Carter helped by liberalizing international aviation agreements, "International investment started in Georgia in a big way when we finally broke the monopoly of New York, Miami, Los Angeles and San Francisco on intercontinental nonstop air service," said George Berry, commissioner of the Georgia Department of Transportation and a former aviation commissioner for Atlanta. "Atlanta received authority to begin nonstop service to London in 1978. That is the date from which our major international investment has occurred."

Corporate Love Story A Prosperous Affair

TLANTA — Last month at the Coca-Cola Co.'s 100th buthday celebration here. Mayor Andrew Young donned a red Coca-Coca shirt and, along with the company's president. Roberto C. Goizueta, led the singure of "I'd Like to Buy the World a Coke," the 1960 commercial jingle that became a hit song. "This is our way of saying, 'Thank you for all you've done for Atlanta, Coca-Cola, "Mr.

Young said. The mayor knew the city had more to be grateful for than the park in which he was standing, which was named for the company's late president, Robert W. Woodruff, Coca-Cola is the city's most prominent corporate citizen and a major benefactor. Mr. Woodruff gave away or influenced foundations to donate a total of $350 million.

The participation of 300,000 Atlantans m the Coca-Cola celebrations reflected their awareness of the company's importance to the city. Atlantans seem to believe that the pros-perity of the city and its corporations are closely entraned.

For a Southern city, Atlanta is exceedingly formal. Open-collared shirts or khaki suits. which are de rigueur in summer in Miami or Houston, are rarely spotted here, where husiness suits and ties are the norm. Atlanta is sometimes referred to as the New York of the South and it is, by nearly every measure, a corporate town.

It cannot claim many major corporate headquarters, yet it is ranked third by Forbes as a headquarters site for America's small companies, those with sales of $1 million to $300 million. And John Naisbitt, the author, sees Atlanta as one of the 10 best places in the United States to start a business

Atlanta has long been a distribution point for the Southeast. The city was born at the juncture of railroad lines and continues its transportation role as a major airline hub. As a result, 490 of the Fortune 500 companies have some type of office or facility in the city - most often a regional or district office.

Some corporations, however, have moved their national headquarters here, such as Georgia-Pacific Corp. "Our performance has definitely benefited hy our proximity to growing markets," said the company's chairman and chief executive officer, T. Marshall Hahn

The nearly four years since our relocation to Atlanta have proved the soundness of our decision." he said, "We chose Atlanta because of its favorable business climate, its excellent transportation network, the quality of life it offers for employees and its position as the center of growth in the Southeast."

But then, the corporate community is closely knit, As Joho W. McIntyre, chairman and chief executive officer of C&S Georgia Corp., one of the city's largest banking groups, said, "Atlanta's senior executives all know each other. We tead to live in the same area and

Although most Atlantans are not always appreciative of the city's corporate largesse, at times they try to retorn the favor.

In 1982, when Deita Air Lines reported its first money-losing year, employees banded together to show their gratitude for the company's policy of not laving off employees, Three flight attendants launched a drive to raise $30 million to buy the company a Boeing 767. Two years later, with conces sions from white leaders to build several black schools, the tax boost sailed through with black support at the polls.

There were no black policemen until 1948, and they could not arrest whites for years. Yet, despite blacks lack of real power, white politicians gingerly courted them in the 1940s and 1950s at integrated lunches hosted by the all-black "Hungry Club." Blacks asked tough questions politely, recalled John Cox, 56, a black Delta Airlines vice president.

Such gentility was severely tested in 1959, as blacks protested segregated hunch counters downtown. When other demonstrations over school desegregation threatened to explode, Robert W. Woodruff, the late president of Atlanta-based Coca-Cola, sum-moned business leaders to his office and quietly demanded schools be kept open at all costs. Mayor Ivan Allen, Jr., the genteel patriarch who presided over much of Atlanta's racial change, suggested that the integration of the lunch counters coincide with the schools. But that would mean a five-month wait. Enter Martin Luther King, Jr. He asked blacks for patience. "I find people here who are not willing to wait another five months after waiting a bundred years," he railed from the pulpit. "If anyone breaks this contract, let it be the white man."

Spit took the minister and former diplo-I asking him to fix potholes. The response astounded Mr. Young, but did not disarm him. Three days later, he put on blue coveralls and a hard hat and set out to fix four of the crevasses himself. It was a public relations tour de force, with two dozen reporters on hand to jot down his jokes and pledges to see to the "details" of city government.

The pothole incident is one example of what has made the mayor of this Sunbelt city so politically resilient and, to his critics, so fustrating as an administrator.

Mr. Young does not spend much time learning about Atlanta's potholes, or many of its other daily problems. Instead, he approaches the job the way a professor would approach a class. In his occasional appearances, he draws a broad and clegant picture of where the city is and where it should go, and then lets others fill in the details. And when this visionary style of government gets him into trouble, he can usually charm his way out of it.

"He himself has realized his management won't work in an ingrained bureaucracy," said Stoney Cooks, the mayor's chief adviser. 'If be had a style that translated his goals into reality, he would be seen as a fantastic may-

Asit is, Mr. Young can take credit for doing for Atlanta what President-Ronald Reagan has done for the United States: He has made has dene for the Onited States: Fit has matter the white basiness community feel good again. He believes the best way to intrifire racial harmony in this majority black city is by ignining its entrepreneurial spirit and leating some of the wealth bubble up to aid the poor.

"Ive made peace with capitalism," he was quoted as saying last year in an article in Esquire. "There's nothing better for coping with sin. It rewards the people for working hard."

When Mr. Young was elected in 1981, he had the advantage of being the city's second black mayor. The first, Maynard H. Jackson, had taken on the job of integrating the city's comomy and left the white business commu-

Mr. Young could afford to make peace with white business leaders and he claims this as one of his major accomplishments. At the time I was elected mayor, there was a fear that and where we could generate jobs. I think that has been done far better than I had anticipated.

But critics of Mr. Young say his pilgrimages across the world to bring foreign trade and commerce to Atlanta has kept him out of town so much that he is not an effective mayor.

Meanwhile, Mr. Young's energetic support of development, and his philosophy that wealth eventually makes its way to people with initiative, have angered some of the city's poor blacks, as well as some middle-class whites who have stayed in the city. Both groups considered themselves part of the mayor's constituency.

And with good reason. In his first cam-paign, Mr. Young pledged "to fight against any threat to the character of the residential communities." Yet, he has emerged since then as a chief proponent of a highway that would carry traffic from downtown to the new Jim-my Carter Library, which, in the view of critics of the plan, would disrupt some of Atlanta's oldest and greenest neighborhoods. At the same time, some of the defenders of Atlanta's poor residents complain that "no attention has been paid to the have nots," in the words of Charles King, president of the Urban Crisis Center in Atlanta. "Young has been concerned so much with keeping the city alive, the have-nots are dying on the vine." But Mr. Young, like Mr. Reagan, seems protected by his charm. He was elected to a second term last year with more than .80 percent of the vote.

Downtown Revival Goes Underground

TLANTA - Much of the city's past lives underground below the streets, along bleak corridors, in mins buried under the city's thicket of skyscrapers.

In that subterranean world inhabited sometimes by vagrants lies a town that has lived three lives and died three deaths. First, it was torched by the Union Army. Then, it was built over. And then, after a brief revival as Atlanta's playground, it was abandoned.

Today, it is trying to rise again, in the same tradition that turned this city of Civil War ashes into the capital of the South.

What Mayor Andrew Young wants to do is give downtown Atlanta the kind of vibrance for which his hometown of New Orleans is known. His administration is backing a $150million project conceived by the developer who turned Faneuil Hall in Boston and Har-borplace in Baltimore into modern American DISZZSS.

But the question is whether the new and more elaborate Underground district can help reverse a pattern common to many U.S. cities since the 1960s: the flight of people and businesses to the suburbs. The downtown of this majority black city, invaded by businessmen during the day, is descrited after 5 P.M. And few of those who feel comfortable in the noon sun of a downtown park would consider stay-ing in the area after a workday, or returning there on the weekend.

The problem you describe is the reason why we're undertaking the project in the first place," said Joe Marin, president of the Un-derground Festival Development Co., a private corporation created to oversee the project. "We want to breathe life into the city, draw people from all over the place and make downtown Atlanta the true heart of the metropolitan community."

If this happens, it will be the third resurcc-tion for this part of the city. In 1864, General William T. Sherman and his Union forces destroyed Atlanta. When the city came to life again at the turn of the century, it was in the area of today's Underground that residents chose to do commerce

In the 1920s, as the rebuilt Atlanta prospered, viaducts were constructed over the old railroad lines to relieve the congestion in this central business district. This meant that the first floors of many buildings stayed below street level and were ignored over the years as the upper stories were rebuilt and modified. This "underground" city remained largely forgotten until the 1960s, when it was rediscovered, first by college students who went there to drink and shoot rats, and then by investors, who eventually turned it into an entertainment area.

copie often describe the old Underground as a tamer version of the French Quarter in New Orleans, and although it has faded long ago in the memories of Atlanta residents, it is still one of the first attractions that tourists ask to see. In its heyday, the Underground had more than 70 nightclubs and restaurants that drew 4.5 million tourists, conventioneers and area residents every year. But several things combined to kill its success.

The counties surrounding Atlanta that had prohibited the sale of alcohol relaxed the restriction and suddenly downtown Atlanta had competition from the suburbs for its partying clientele. Then, the drinking age was lowered to 18, and the influx of young people to the Underground put off its older patrons.

Forgotten city of nightlife was unearthed in '60s.

Also, about the same time, the city began building a rapid rail system, which razed some of the Underground's buildings.

But perhaps more than anything else, the Underground was the victim of white flight. During the 1970s, as the northern end of downtown continued to grow, Atlanta lost 14 percent of its population. The population in the suburbs, meanwhile, increased by 28 per-cent. Today, 1.8 million suburbanites encircle the city. About 450,000 people remain in the city, and 68 percent of them are black. By early 1981, only 10 businesses remained in the Underground. By the end of that year, all had cither folded or followed the population to the suburbs.

or all its troubles, the Underground has a remarkable history of resil-ience. This time, the mayor himself has come to the rescue, naming the project the top priority of his administration when he was elected in 1981.

Late last year, he said: "There will be an Underground project developed, whether it'sthe same project we are talking about now or not. The commission of both the public and private sector has guaranteed that there will be an Underground.

But the plan, which includes a marketplace. two plazas, a theater that would depict the history of Atlanta, and a museum, has faced a series of obstacles since it was proposed. The latest problem was a decision by the Georgia Supreme Court in December, striking down the original financial plan. The court said the package, which involved issuing $85 million worth of bonds, had to be approved by the voters.

To avoid the cost and complication of a referendum, supporters of the project have designed a new financial package which was recently accepted by Fulton County Superior Coart. And although city officials are still waiting to hear from the higher state court, they are speaking confidently about the Underground's future.

srael's Military Economy Faces Challenge of Peace

By LEONARD SILK New York Times Service.

EL AVIV --- The halt of hyperinflation in Israel is the necessary, but not sufficient, condition for resumed economic growth. The sharp cuts in its budget deficits have given Israel the opportunity to restructure its conomy from one overwhelmingly dominated by the governsent to one in which private investment can provide the thrust ar vigorous growth.

During the years of high inflation, from 1973 to 1984, Israel'a audget deficits averaged 14 percent of the gross national product - a ratio nearly three times as high as that incurred by the United inter during the Reagan administration.

Following the adoption of the stabilization program of July 985, which included cuts in overnment spending and igher taxes, Israel's budget thick shrank to 3.3 percent of TNP during the second half 1985. Without charges for nterest payments on the pubic debt, the budget actually howed a surplus equal to 1.5 ercent of GNP.

labor to industry to strengthen our economy."

That drastic reduction in borrowing means that the govern-ent no longer must devour virtually the whole of national avings. Not only did the government absorb the hon's share of private savings, it also became the source of whatever funds business could obtain for investment, whether from domestic or foreign sources. Now it is in a position to start withdrawing from its controlling role over the economy.

Some economists fear, however, that the government's appetite for control has been curbed only temporarily. Professor Michael Bruno of Hebrew University, one of the architects of the stabilization program, warns that the cuts in the budget deficit came chiefly from the tax side and are antigrowth. He wants to see substantial cuts in both military and civilian oatlays to clear the. way for the tax cuts he believes are necessary to spur growth. Another worry of economists and business executives is that the government will hold onto its control of the capital markets, even though it no longer needs to borrow as much.

HE MAIN THRUST of the recently released report of the Bejski Commission, appointed to clean up the mess following Israel's boom and bust in bank stocks, is to strengthen the capital markets by eliminating conflicts of interest among the banks in their various roles as fiduciary agents for the public, stockbrokers, bond dealers, investment advisers and investment bankers as well as commercial bankers.

Thus far, however, the Bejski report has received a cool and marded reception from the government. It has resulted only in the removal from their jobs of some top bankers, including the governor of the nation's central bank, Moshe Mandelbaum. On Wednesday, Prime Minister Shimon Peres accepted Mr. Mandelbaum's resignation, even though his successor had not been found. The man regarded as the leading candidate to replace Mr. Mandelbaum, deputy finance minister Adi Amorai, has been put on hold because he is a member of the Labor Party. The - reason is that the vice prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir, a member appreciation as time wears on," said Kazuo Nukazawa, director of the international economic affairs department of the Keidanren, Japan's most powerful big-business organiza-tion. "The disadvantages came first." The likely changes include these:

· More overseas manufacturing, and the development of management techniques that can easily be adapted to work forces in other nations · Increased imports of manufactured goods, particularly from newly industrializing Asian countries, such as South Korea and

 A shift in employment from manufacturing to the service sector,

• More emphasis on developing new busi-nesses and products that cater to Japan's domestic market.

"I think that broader structural shifts are going to be important," said Peter Morgan, an economist for Jardine Fleming Securities Ltd, here. "The areas that were good for the economy in the past few years - exports, capital spending -- are going to be bad in the next few years."

For most Japanese, the most immediate change caused by the high yen is unpleasant: A drop in profitability at large corporations and a potentially more serious drop in orders and sales at smaller companies.

In the fiscal year ended March 31, corpo-rate profits declined for the first time in three years, according to Wako Research Institute of Economics, which analyzed 420 compa-nies. The manufacturing concerns surveyed recorded an average drop of 25.1 percent, while profits for manufacturers of electrical machinery dropped 35.1 percent,

Individual companies reported even more dramatic declines: 67.8 percent at computer telecommunications company Fujitsu , 60.3 percent at Nippon Steel and about 50 percent at audio company Japan Victor. Toyota Motor Corp. is predicting its first profit decline in five years when it ends its Manufacturers of durable goods, such as furniture and major appliances, are hurting the most, Mr. Jasinowski said. This reflects their reliance on credit purchases at a time when consumers have high debt loads and are wary of taking on more, he said.

In New York, the free-market peso closed at 655 bid, 660 asked, down from a range of 635-640 at the close on Thursday.

The peso briefly slipped past the 600 mark on Wednesday before strengthening later in the day to 585-595. It was the first time the peso had traded below 600.

The free-market rate is used in tourism and for most border and private transactions.

A second rate, set daily by the central Bank of Mexico and representatives of commercial banks, was about 543 on Thursday. The rate is used in approximately 80 percent of the nation's commercial transactions.

It was unclear what forces were driving the latest deterioration in the peso's value, Although the currency has weakened sharply in re-cent years, it had held relatively stable in recent months. It started 1986 at 445 to the dollar.

Yen's Rise Expected to Aid Japan in Long Term

By then, South Korea's nuclear program will be on par with that of France and only a handful of other nations. Taiwan, which has a comparable commitment to nuclear energy, halted construction recently on its fourth twin-reactor plant, citing the Soviet accident and lower fuel costs. "There's no reason to stop this program, even with low oil prices." said Choi Chang Tong, general manager of Kepco's power planning department. "We think there's still great uncertainty in prospects for oil prices."

Apart from its pessimistic view of the rest. of future petroleum costs, South Korea also recognizes that it is trading in a buyers' market. With the exception of orders placed by China, there have been no new contracts for nuclear plants since 1978. As a consequence, the bids sub-mitted for South Korea's next two plants reportedly were at rock-bottom levels. Government officials opment. say the plants are expected to cost tially below the average cost of comparable plants elsewhere.

Westinghouse also may have an edge because it already has supplied South Korea with six pressurized-water reactors. Kepco is seeking to standardize its plants as it moves toward local manufacturing and maintenance of its systems.

Ironically, the Soviet nuclear disaster in Chernobyl has benefited South Korea in that it prompted President Chun Doo Hwan to order inspections of the nation's nuclear plants and to reorganize the government's regulatory agencies. "Safety is taken substantially more seriously than it used to be," a foreign analyst said. "Safety and electricity production are now of equal importance."

South Korea had been severely crinicized for its regulatory shortcomings, notably in a World Bank

The bank said Indonesia's economy was bad-ly hit by the drop in oil prices and the fall of the dollar. The nation depends on oil exports for about 70 percent of its foreign exchange. The report forecast annual growth of less than 2 percent for the next two years, even if the government keeps a tight rein on the economy. The bank said measures announced by Jakar-ta last month to stimulate non-oil exports and foreign investment were a good start, but that 4 GRI 14 GGTI 19 SG GGAVCO SS GGAVCO AMEX Highs-Lows 109 7345345 735578 4975 7575 (3 ,60 2.3 22 ,85 54 12 ,105 7 14 ,20 1,4 20 7 .850 7.5 379 196 12 CDI 54 CMI Cp 734 CSS n 134 Cablv n 9 CaesNJ 642 Cobleta 643 Cobleta 643 Cobleta 643 Cobleta 144 Cobleta 114 Conce 284 CWIng 114 Conce 284 CWIng 114 Conce 284 CWIng 114 Conce 285 CWIng 17 38% 579 8% 13 10% 55 10% 14 15 14 15 14 15 14 15 14 15 14 15 15 12% 10 12% 10 12% 11 30% 11 30% 10 14 4 7 30 30 10 5 9 45 4 2 2 2 9 1 18 44 11 5722047485W273 .14 5 35 6 1.40 4.4 14 .10c 3.8 .40 3.1 17 909 694 11 - 16 106 261 65 16 44 27 7 28 34 64 HIGHS 31 Boldwin Sec ChampProf 88CO Inc GouldLP n Helco Howel()nd MarkIV Woodstream CarePL of Chi Rivet Eroind e HomeShop n IntSeawy Tr Olig Ind Amedice ChimbDvA n Dilliand s FurVault s Hasbre Hasbre MacNiSch Tuttar Brat Adam Rusei ChrinbDevin CrowinCrf FtCapHHile Harvey Gr HornHar LSB Ing Plar 1 (inc v 50 22 23 23 19 19 19 19 27 31 36 5 16 18)2]0 30

MBB Sees Big Potential In China Plane Venture

By Ronald van de Krol

HANNOVER, West Germany The West German aircraft industry has been given a potentially big break into the buge Chinese market.

The break came with the signing Friday by China and West Germany's largest acrospace company of an agreement on joint development of a new plane.

The plane, to be designed by h. iserschmitt-Bolkow-Blohm and China Aero-Technology Import & Export Corp., will carry 60 to 85 passengers on mainly regional flights.

The two companies have already begun feasibility studies on the

Airbus Industrie Aiming for 30% Of World Market

HANNOVER, West Germany - Airbus Industrie, the Earopean aircraft consortium, is aiming long term for a 30-percent share of the varid market, the general manager, Naibert Flossdorff, said Friday. Speaking at the Hannover Air Show, Mr. Flossdorff said the ex-pansion of the Airbus fleet with the planned A-330 and A-340 long-range models would play a significant role in achieving this aim.

The Airbus president, Jean Pier-son, said that if this target were reached, Airbus Industrie could be financially independent by the mid-1990s. The consortium currently relies on loans from member governments. Airbus's partners are France, Britain, West Germany It will be equipped with special and Spain. Development of the two starting and landing equipment. new models was running according to schedule, Airbus officials said.

Mr. Pierson said Airbus needed Eqe initial customers in order to wart construction of the new aircraft and there were intensive discussions with the West German state airline, Deutsche Lufthansa AG, and the Swiss carrier, Swissair. Luithansa had originally rejected goe design but a second with a greater range than the original has been well received, he said,

Mr. Flossdorff said there were already 134 firm orders from 12 customers for the A-320, which is due to go into operation in March of next year.

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration, in another volley in its trade battle with Canada, announced on Friday that it was launching an investigation that could lead to duties on Canadian softwood lumber imports.

The action by the Commerce Department came on a petition filed May 19 by a group of U.S. humber producers allegiog that low 'slumpage" fees set by Canada's privincial governments for cutting timber on state land amounted to an unfair trade subsidy.

The group is seeking dutics of up percent on the Canadian lumber imports, which totaled $2.6 billion last year. It argued that the subsidies had allowed Canadian companies to capture 33 percent of the softwood lumber market in the United States.

Under U.S. trade laws, the U.S. International Trade Commission has until July 3 to make a preliminary judgment on whether the American timber industry is being injured.

' If the commission's finding is positive, the Commerce Department will have until August 12 to determine the level of duties to be imposed on Canadian softwood exnorters.

If the 27-percent tariff requested the U.S. lumber producers is ccepted by the Commerce Departnent, it would cripple the Canadian forestry industry and cost thousands of jobs.

When a similar petition for penalties was filed in 1983, the Commorce Department ruled that Canadian exports were fairly priced. The Canadian government had hoped that decision would work as a precodent in its favor this time. In Ottawa, the secretary of state for external affairs, Joe Clark, said Canada would make a "strong case" against the tariffs in testimo ny before International Trade immission officials beginniog List week in Washington.

He said he was worried that U.S. enators from some lumber-producing states might interfere in the commission's investigation and infuence the final decision.

The inquiry was the latest in a services of retaliatory trade swipes that the two nations have taken at one another over the past two WOCKS.

The events appeared to jeopardiste the countries' efforts to begin talks on a free-trade agreement designed to eliminate all barriers, tariffs, quotas and subsidies.

Deposition politicians in Canaaccused the government of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of having agreed to the investigation of the humber industry in exchange for approval by the U.S. Senate Finance Committee in April of frog-unde negotations. (AP. UPI)

POSTCARD Chile in Double Disguise

said

By Alan Riding Booth - Angered to find he B was listed among 5,000 Chil-eans permanently exiled by the Pinochet government, the film director Miguel Littin went home in disguise last year and spent six weeks making a lengthy documen-tary about Chile.

The story of his trip has just been published here, but also under a form of disguise: It is a first-person account, but it has been written hy Gabriel Garcia Marquez, the Colombian winner of the Nobel Prize for literature.

The central figure of both is, of course, the real Miguel Littin, the dark, portly and bearded director who narrates the documentary and provided 18 hours of taped reminiscences from which Garcia Marquez extracted his report.

But the person who appears in the film and who constantly surfaces in the book is a slimmeddown, light-haired, beardless Uruguayan public-relations agent whose identity Littin assumed in Chile

"I spent weeks learning to speak, to laugh, to walk, to gesture differently," the director recalled during a visit here to mark the publication of the book. "The Adventure of Miguel Littin, Clandestine in Chile." "And after it was all over, it took me weeks to return to heing шe.

For the book, on the other hand, Garcia Marquez had 10 assume Littin's identity. And to this end, he used a technique that he tested as a journalist 30 years ago when he wrote in the first person "The Story of a Shipwrecked Sailor," which was recently published for the first time in the United States.

"I uoderwent a relaxed but very precise interrogation," Littin said of the days he spent with Garcia Marquez at the Littin home in Madrid last November, "He'd ask me to remember how someone was dressed, to remember smells, the weather, how people walked, what bolero was on the radio and so on, Then he'd give me homework. He'd say he wanted more details on my itinerary, what train 1 took, and so on,' Garcia Marquez, who lives io Mexico City, explained in an introduction that, whenever possible, he used Littin's own words and expressions when compressing 600 pages of transcript down to 150 pages of text, although he noted. The voice of a writer is oot interchangeable."

Littin, though, said he recog-nized his own voice in the book. "The organization and structure of the book are Garcia Marquez's, hut the final text is different but somehow the same as the transcript," he

This is not, however, a book of the film. The idea of the book in fact came only after Littin left Chile last July, and its purpose is apparently to record many of the experiences and sentiments that do not appear in the film. There is, for example, Littin's shock at the "abominable silence" warlock. of Santiago under curfew during his first night hack home and there the United Congregational is the moment his mother failed to recognize him during a surprise visit to his village. And there is also the experience of watching General Augusto Pinochet walk past him while he was purportedly filming architectural features of the presi dent's Moneda Palace. But the premise of his documentary is different. "The film is about Chile and not about me." he explained. "It's about daily lives in Chile and how they have changed under the dictatorship. That's why the book and the film complement each other."

Already a successful filmmaker before he fled Chile after the 1973 military coup, Littin continued to make movies in exile, two of which, The Letters of Marusia" and "Alcino and the Condor," won Oscar nominations in 1976 and 1982 respectively for the best foreign film of the year.

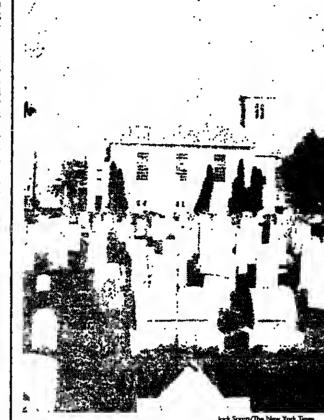

But he said the idea of making a documentary about contemporary Chile and particularly, the country's memories of the late Socialist president, Salvador Allende Gossens, began to obsess him. "When my same appeared on the list of those who could not return. I decided to make the film anyway," he added.

Cut from almost 100,000 feet of film, the documentary will he shown on television and in film festivals io Europe and Latio America this summer under the title, "Testimony in Chile," in either four one-bour "chapters" or a coo-

Senator Jake Garn, Republican of Utah, said Thursday that he or one of his sons may donate a kid-ney to his ailing 27-year-old daugh-ter next year. Susan Garn Horn, who is married to a doctor and lives in Vienna, Virginia, suffers from progressive kidney failure, the Descret News and The Salt Lake Tribune reported. The donor will be determined on the basis of the best match for Horn. Garn asked Utah news organizations not to use the story, but the American Banker, a daily banking trade paper, reported it. Garn angrily told Utah news personnel that no reporter from the American Banker "will ever have an interview with me, ever. They will never again interview this chairman of the Senate Banking testers, ranging in age from 7 months to 63 years, toted signs Committee. I'm the public official, not Susan."
